

MOTHER'S SOBS HALTS HEARING OF EVANGELIST

Mrs. Minnie Kennedy and Her Evangelist Daughter Are Taken From Courtroom.

KIDNAPING STORY IS READ TO COURT

Outburst Comes as District Attorney Asa Keyes Reads Testimony Given Before Grand Jury.

BY DAN CAMPBELL.
United News Staff Correspondent.
Los Angeles, September 29.—Aimee Semple McPherson's preliminary hearing on charges of conspiring to execute a kidnapping hoax as a blind for her alleged relations with Kenneth G. Ormiston, was halted temporarily Wednesday afternoon by the collapse of her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy. Mrs. Kennedy, who is business manager of her evangelist daughter's Angelus temple and a co-defendant in the conspiracy trial, burst into tears and sobbed so hysterically that both she and Mrs. McPherson had to be taken from the courtroom.

Mrs. Kennedy's outburst was the first of its kind, despite the emotional strain of the trial. She began weeping while District Attorney Asa Keyes was reading into the record a transcript of Mrs. McPherson's kidnapping story as she had told it to the two grand juries which had investigated her strange disappearance last summer.

Court Recess Ordered.
As the district attorney's voice droned on, Mrs. Kennedy's condition became worse. Soon she was weeping about in her chair and making such a disturbance that Judge Samuel Blake could not hear what Keyes was saying. He then ordered court recessed until Mrs. Kennedy had recovered. She and the evangelist were driven to their home adjoining the temple.

When the hearing was resumed after nearly four hours, the district attorney and his assistants completed reading Mrs. McPherson's testimony. The evangelist and her mother had both returned to the courtroom and sat quietly through the remainder of the session.

Keyes indicated that he desired to get Mrs. McPherson's story for her testimony into the record to support the charge of conspiracy to defraud justice. Earlier in the session the district attorney had read into the record a transcript of the "Four Square" gospel which she had given to the public.

Howard C. Benedict, owner of the famous "love cottage," whose bored, composed manner on the witness stand has routed the best effort of cross-examination, held the court in silent suspense as he took the stand again.

Mrs. McPherson's testimony was expected to prove an important witness for the state, as she stated in an affidavit that the evangelist promised to pay her for producing a "Miss X."

Benedict testified that Mrs. Wiseman's ankles in no way resembled those of the woman he had introduced to as Ormiston's wife.

He said the woman was so thoroughly

Issuance of Scrip To Avert Crisis In Schools Seen

Sims Greatly Discouraged in Efforts To Secure Private Indorsements of $500,000 Note.

MAYOR LAYS BLAME ON SCHOOL BOARD

Orme, Head of Finance Committee, Says Banks May Be Induced To Handle Scrip.

Possibility that the city of Atlanta will issue scrip to meet the school crisis and thus prevent closing of its schools in the face of approximately 60,000 children was seen Wednesday when Mayor Walter A. Sims declared that his proposal to secure private indorsements of a note for $500,000 has been "sadly disappointing."

This suggestion also met with approval of Councilman A. J. Orme, chairman of the finance committee of council, who declared that council would do all in its power to keep the schools open, but at the same time issued a statement along with the mayor in which he placed blame for the financial difficulty of the department squarely on the school board.

Both Mayor Sims and Councilman Orme declared that the board knew the money it had with which to administer affairs of the school department at the beginning of the year, and in the face of this spent funds until almost three-quarters of a million are required to prevent actual closing of Atlanta's schools in the face of approximately 60,000 students.

Mayor Is Discouraged.
The mayor Wednesday afternoon appeared discouraged concerning his attempt to get prominent Atlantans to come to the rescue of the schools and indorse the school note for $500,000. He stated that the only way out that presents itself at the present is the note fails for the city to issue scrip to teachers for salaries. Mr. Orme said that although the Atlanta Clearing House association seems loath to handle the scrip, it might be prevailed upon to do so.

While the school board took the attitude of having been forced to overspend its funds in order to assure proper and efficient operation of the schools, thus disclaiming any responsibility for "mismanagement and extravagance," members of city council declared that the school department has persisted in running over its appropriations every year since it has been divorced from any connection with council.

Under the present laws, the board is supreme in administering affairs of the department, and all council has

Bobby Jones Is Honored By Scot Club

Atlanta's Great Golf Champion Made Member of Exclusive Organization.

London, England, September 29.—(United News.)—Robert Tyre Jones, Jr., of Atlanta, Ga., who won the British open golf championship this year in addition to his other honors has been accorded an honor seldom received by Americans or other foreigners.

Bobby has been elected a member of the famous and most exclusive Royal and Ancient Golf club at St. Andrews, Scotland.

The Prince of Wales is captain of the club's golf team, and its membership embraces the aristocracy of the British golf world.

The young Atlanta golfer's prowess on the links alone never could have won him election to the Royal and Ancient. The unusual honor is a tribute to Bobby Jones' sportsmanship and charm.

GINNERS CLOSE DOWN UNTIL COTTON RISES

Jackson, Miss., September 29.—(AP.)—A special dispatch received today by the Jackson Daily News states that notices have been placed on gins at Ackerman, Weir and McCool instructing ginners to close down until there is a rise in cotton values. It is reported that ginning has ceased in compliance with the written notices.

Manager Coleman of the Federal Compress company plant at West Point has increased his night guard for fear of incendiarism, although he has received no warnings, the report said.

Cotton growers near Electric Mills are reported to be picking cotton at night in an effort to get it to market before the price takes still greater declines.

COTTONGROWERS APPEAL FOR AID TO WASHINGTON

Secretary Jardine Urged To Find Way To Financially Assist Planters of South.

ALABAMA OPPOSES HOLDING PROPOSAL

Long Time Pool Is Proposed With All Pledges in Writing—Farmers Refusing to Pick Staple.

Montgomery, Ala., September 29.—(AP)—An appeal to W. M. Jardine, secretary of agriculture, with a view to determining what financial aid is available for the organized southern cotton planters was telegraphed by Edward O'Neal, president of the Alabama farm bureau today.

Coincident with the appeal circular letters were mailed from the farm bureau to bankers, merchants, business men and farmers throughout Alabama, opposing a "disorganized holding movement" and summarizing what is claimed as a serious situation.

Farmers are discouraged and bankers and business men are distressed, the letter points out, declaring that "a reduction of business which approaches a collapse is impending."

Farmers in some sections are refusing to pick their cotton and advising their creditors to do whatever they please about it, the letter continues.

"Southern people generally are clamoring for information as to what to do," the letter reads. "A holding movement is being suggested, but we are opposed to a disorganized holding movement because it has been tried on different occasions in the past and each time it has failed. It has failed because it is impractical and unsound. Disorganized holding can do nothing more than complicate a disastrous situation."

"In view of the large amount of cotton that must be carried over we suggest a long time pool with the proviso that those who put cotton in it pledge themselves in writing to reduce their cotton acreage next year by at least 25 per cent. If this can be done the present market will be relieved and the surplus of cotton can be carried over and marketed orderly at living prices. Without a guarantee that the acreage will be reduced the Alabama farm bureau will not be interested in a proposition of this kind."

The carry-over above the demand this year will be about 6,000,000 bales, the bureau estimated.

SHERIFF DOESN'T EXPECT TROUBLE

West Point, Miss., September 29.—(AP)—Sheriff Dave Cottrell, of Clay county, reported tonight that as a result of anonymous messages tacked on cotton gins in this territory ordering that operations be ceased until better prices may be obtained for cotton, an Ackerman plant has closed for an indefinite period. Owners of other gins in Ackerman, McCool and Weir are considering suspending operations tomorrow, the sheriff was informed.

Sheriff Cottrell believes the warnings were distributed by despondent farmers, who are discouraged because of the unusually low prices for their principal crop. He does not expect any serious trouble due to dissatisfaction among planters.

The messages which caused the excitement were written in legible style. They did not cause gin owners to be apprehensive of incendiarism, but several of them would maintain night watchmen.

Dispatches from Electric Mills told of efforts of farmers to remove cotton from their fields before prices fall lower, by several land owners in order to obtain assistance of their neighbors in emptying the bolls by moonlight. Amid these affairs, which have been outwardly merry, there has been an undercurrent of seriousness.

Man Wedded During Storm At Miami Dies

Tech Graduate, Husband of "Hurricane Bride" Succumbs to Injuries.

Bennington, Vt., September 29.—(AP)—The "Hurricane Bride," as she was known in Hollywood, Fla., during the days following the disaster, Miss Laura Gleason, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dexter M. Gleason, of Bennington, has become a hurricane widow, her husband having succumbed to injuries suffered when the house in which they were passing the remainder of their wedding night crashed and buried them in the wreckage.

The bridegroom of a week was Thomas H. McCarrel, Jr., 24, a native of Georgia, and a graduate of Georgia Tech.

When removed from underneath the shattered timbers of the frame building a few hours after his marriage, he was moved to a hospital, where he died soon after an operation.

Miss Gleason, now Mrs. McCarrel, and her brother, John J. Gleason, went to Florida a year ago, when he formed a partnership with the technical school graduate in the nursery business. Early in the evening of Friday, September 17, when the storm began, most of the men around Hollywood had been called to Miami Beach to lay a line of sandbags along the water front in an effort to protect valuable property from the rapidly rising waves in Biscayne bay, McCarrel did not join the workers for the reason that several young women at his parents' home protested against being left alone.

McCarrel and Miss Gleason's approaching wedding became a subject of conversation. There was immediate action when the young woman started the group with the remark that "I was born in a blizzard on Woodford mountain, Vermont, and I suppose it would be the thing for me to be married in a Florida hurricane."

Hurrying into an automobile the couple drove to Fort Lauderdale and routed the municipal judge out of bed to perform the ceremony. When the couple arrived at Hollywood with the news of their marriage, the storm had increased.

The brother turned over his house to his sister and her husband. Inside of an hour the honeymooners were frantically engaged in an effort to keep the storm from blowing in the windows. Toward morning they were joined by eight refugees. At 7 o'clock the house crashed and when the bride of a few hours regained consciousness she was lying with a broken left arm, beside her husband, who was pinned down by a heavy door. With her still useful arm she dragged away the door and lapsed into unconsciousness.

FIGHT TO END GRAFT TRIALS MEETS DEFEAT

Judge Mack Denies Motion To Dismiss Indictments Against Daugherty and Miller.

JURY RECALLED TO CASE TODAY

Court Rules Assistant to Miller Had Not Been Shown Party to Conspiracy.

New York, September 29.—The conspiracy trial of Harry M. Daugherty and Thomas W. Miller, halted to permit Judge Mack to listen behind closed doors to lengthy arguments of defense counsel for dismissal, will be resumed tomorrow. The dismissal motions were denied late today, and announcement was made that Judge M. Mack had decided the trial must proceed.

The scene was transferred to the judge's chambers in the Woolworth building from open court as soon as United States Attorney Buckner rested his case yesterday. The jury was sent home, the defendants left, and only judge and counsel were permitted to attend the private hearing.

This procedure was held by attorneys to be unusual but not unprecedented. No reason was given for not hearing the motions in open court.

About 4:30 p. m. when the meeting broke up, Buckner told newspapermen the court had given him permission to state that the motions for dismissal had been denied and that the regular court would be resumed tomorrow, when the defense will attempt to break down the evidence presented by the government in the first three weeks of the trial.

He also said that Judge Mack had ruled that George E. Williams, who was assistant to Miller when the latter was alien property custodian in 1921, had not been shown to have been a conspirator in the alleged illegal release of $7,000,000 assets of the American Metal company, impounded during the war under the Trading with the Enemy act.

Miller and Daugherty, who was attorney general at the time, are charged with conspiring to defraud the government of their best services in permitting release of the assets. The government alleges that they permitted the release under the inducement of "hypodermic injections of graft," made by the government in the late 1920s for $441,000 to arrange the release.

Boy of Six To Read Today First Message From Grave

Vineand, N. J., September 29.—(AP.)—To John Stevenson, Jr., on his sixth birthday tomorrow, will come his father's first words of counsel from the grave. John will open a letter and read the advice written by his father shortly before he died, while in a box will remain a stack of other letters to be opened one by one on each birthday until the boy reaches manhood.

"Daddy Dick," as the boy always spoke of his father, was a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania. He was gassed in the world war. He died in April, after an operation for appendicitis, at the age of 36. Apparently the elder Stevenson believed he would not live long, for in a private box after his death were found the letters to his son. One, inscribed "to be opened after my death," was addressed to the lad. "Each year, until you are big, you will get a letter from your daddy on your birthday," it said, "and then you will get your last letter when you are married."

The letter concluded with a message of affection for the son and his mother, both of whom still reside here, and was signed "Daddy Dick."

EUROPE IS AGOG OVER MUSSOLINI SECRET MEETING

Sir Austen Chamberlain Will Confer With Dictator of Italy Today, As Assert Rome Dispatches.

PLACE OF PARLEY IS UNDIVULGED

Yacht Is Held Ready for Il Duce, and Some Expect Meeting To Take Place at Sea.

Rome, September 29.—(AP)—Intense interest has been aroused here by news that Premier Mussolini and Sir Austen Chamberlain, foreign secretary for Great Britain, will confer tomorrow at some secret place.

Dispatches from London indicate that the place is Civita-Vecchia, 50 miles from Rome.

Some circles in Rome say the meeting will take place on a man-of-war on the high seas, while others maintain a yacht will be used. Still others think that the conference will be on shore.

The Associated Press learned tonight that the meeting will not take place aboard a man-of-war. A yacht is being kept in readiness for the premier, however, if he should need it to reach Sir Austen at sea.

La Trisenna expresses the opinion that the meeting probably will be concerned with particular questions affecting Italy and Great Britain and leading to an exchange of views on the question of strengthening mutual policies in the Mediterranean. The paper also believes that the entire European situation will be considered with reference to the Locarno pact.

Giornale d'Italia says that the meeting undoubtedly will increase the traditional intimate relations between Italy and Great Britain.

"Be it enough to recall the accord over Abyssinia about which the most absurd and fantastic suppositions have been made, while in reality it offended the interests of nobody," the paper says. "It must also be recalled that sympathetic attitude England assumed toward Italy in the Tangier affair. Finally Italy and Great Britain have found themselves side by side, rendering possible a new Franco-German understanding by guaranteeing the pact of Locarno."

LEAGUE EXHIBITS INTEREST IN MEET

Geneva, September 29.—(AP)—The forthcoming conference between Sir Austen Chamberlain and Premier Mussolini is attracting interest in League of Nations circles, where it is believed the British and Italian statesmen are certain to discuss the Abyssinian and Tangier problems.

It is known that the Abyssinian question was "settled out of court," Great Britain and Italy prevailing upon Abyssinia not to appeal further to the league against their alleged pressure for the granting of concessions in Abyssinian territory. The details of the settlement have not been disclosed, but it is probable the matter will be the subject of further exchange of views.

BRITISH REFUSE ANY COMMENT

London, September 29.—(AP)—The British foreign office tonight stated that tomorrow's expected meeting between Foreign Secretary Chamberlain and Premier Mussolini somewhere in Italy, was arranged at the request of the Italian premier.

Beyond stating this, the foreign office has refused to make any comment of the meeting. The Italian premier merely asked to see Sir Austen, who is now on a holiday cruise in the Mediterranean, it was stated. British officials, on the whole, have shown little interest in the expected meeting and have been reticent to discuss it.

CASES OF TYPHOID REPORTED AT HALEAH

Jacksonville, Fla., September 29.—Nelson M. Fuller, sanitation engineer of the city of Jacksonville, was en route to Haleah tonight at the request of the state board of health.

Mr. Fuller was advised by long distance telephone, Dr. M. B. Herlong, city health commissioner said, that several cases of typhoid had developed at Haleah. He was asked to make the trip to inspect sanitation conditions in that section. Mr. Fuller had just returned from an inspection of the storm area.

Mr. Fuller was immediately authorized by Dr. Herlong to make the trip.

Guilty Plea on Man-Slaughter Charge Draws Fine and Sentence on Chaingang.

Hule Reeves charged with involuntary manslaughter in connection with the death on March 21 of Joseph Finn, of Detroit, entered a plea of guilty Wednesday before Judge E. D. Thomas in Fulton superior court and was fined $150 and sentenced to serve 12 months on the chaingang, the sentence being suspended upon payment of the fine.

Reeves was named in an indictment charging three counts returned by the Fulton county grand jury on March 21, alleging that Finn was crushed to death beneath a "white-way" post on Spring street, struck by an automobile driven by Reeves, who was operating the machine while under the influence of liquor and was driving on the right hand side of the street.

The case had been placed on the criminal court calendar more than a half dozen times but each time was postponed.

Finn, and a brother were in Atlanta en route to Lakeland, Fla., to visit their parents. They had stopped in Atlanta to spend the night when the accident occurred.

William Schley Howard, Atlanta attorney, represented Reeves.

PROBE OF DEATHS CAUSED BY FLOOD NOW THREATENED

Refugees May Take Drastic Step Unless Something Is Done To Alleviate Conditions.

Schriber, Fla., September 29.—(AP)—Governor John W. Martin was advised in a telegram from County Judge R. C. Horn, of Glades county, today that unless something was done to alleviate flood conditions in the county, the refugees from the flooded area may demand a coroner's inquest into the deaths caused by the flood.

Governor Martin, it was announced, will visit the flood section either tomorrow or Friday.

Following dispatch of the telegram to Governor Martin, Judge Horn announced that he, accompanied by Thomas Richardson, drainage engineer, would leave tomorrow for Okeechobee City and other points on Lake Okeechobee to obtain evidence in support of their contention that the lake level was four feet higher than government regulations prescribed when the hurricane struck with devastating force nearly two weeks ago. Judge Horn said the position of locks controlling outlets of the lake would be examined and their findings presented to the governor when he arrives.

W. E. Daniels, president of the Glades county rehabilitation organization, today said a majority of Moore Haven residents desire to return provided a guarantee of safety could be made or if they were unable to return, to ascertain what would be done to aid them in being established elsewhere.

RELIEF NOW PLACED ON INDIVIDUAL BASIS

West Palm Beach, Fla., September 29.—(AP)—Emergency relief at Fort Lauderdale and Hollywood, major sections in the hurricane of the east coast, today entered into a second stage when American Red Cross workers took steps to abandon mass feeding and clothing and to place every destitute family on an individual basis.

Gradual elimination of all canteens, clothing depots and supply stations will begin immediately. Homeless families, now being quartered in tent colonies and other temporary quarters, will be given individual orders on their local merchants for groceries, clothing and other essentials, and the merchants will be paid by the American Red Cross. This method will in a measure effect a return to normal business conditions among the merchants who suffered heavy losses.

PROHIBITION NOT ISSUE

"Take a little easier as a whole, prohibition is not playing very much part," he continued. "We have other and more important issues in Massachusetts than that."

"What do you think about prohibition?" he was asked.

"I have no views to express now," he replied.

"Will the campaign slogan be 'Stand for Prohibition'?"

"I like to think about prosperity," he answered. "We also have to keep in mind the achievements of the administration in executive affairs and the desire to continue the policies of the republican party."

Butler said some of the features of the cotton tariff should be increased to help New England textile industries. But he did not know whether anything in this direction could be done at the coming short session of congress.

BAND IS PLAYING AS MINERS LEAVE SHAFT OF DEATH

George Hawes, of Chicago and Captain Oscar Olson Are Heroes of Michigan Town.

BIRCH BARK TEA AIDED PRISONERS

Three Men Were on Sentry Duty and Forty Sleeping When First Rescuer Arrived.

BY NEWBERNE BROWNE.
(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)
Ironwood, Mich., September 29.—Forty-three miners entombed in "G" shaft of the Pabst mine since last Friday, were liberated tonight.

A glad shout burst from the throng of 5,000 crowded about the mouth of the shaft when the first of the 43 stepped out of the hoisting cage. He was Samuel G. Synkelma, and his wife and eight children, the youngest a babe in arms, were on hand to welcome him. Synkelma blinked uncertainly in the fierce light of the movie men's flashes, but a slow grin burst through the red grime and six days' growth of beard.

"I feel fine, boys," was his greeting. "But say, let me wash up a bit. My wife won't know me."

Supported by Mayor.

Mayor John B. Patrick, of Ironwood, and Matt Wicklund, one of the miner heroes who assisted in digging out the 43, supported him. He was hurried in an ambulance to Grandview hospital where all the victims will be kept overnight.

Patiently the crowds, numbering wives, mothers, and sweethearts of the trapped men, and practically the whole of this little mining town in addition, waited outside the barrier ropes until each of the 43 had been hoisted.

As each man, one by one at first, stepped out of the cage, he was greeted by cheers, while in the distance could be heard the blare of a brass band leading a procession of celebrators through the main streets of Ironwood.

Only two of the imprisoned men began to feel acutely the strain of their long fast underground following their release at noon through the heroic efforts of George Hawes, of Chicago, expert safety official of the Pullman company, and Captain Oscar Olson, and their crews, it was said. These two were Captain Thomas Trewarth, 62-year-old shift boss, and Leonard Ureth, former Salvation Army officer.

Proves Valiant Leader.

Captain Trewarth proved a valiant leader in emergency, his men declared, scarcely closing his eyes during the ordeal.

COOLIDGE FAILING PARTY IN CRISIS, CANDIDATES CLAIM

Washington, September 29.—The effort of republican candidates to draw Calvin Coolidge directly into the campaign, against his will, has become the chief activity among republicans. The president wants to make prosperity the issue and keep out of the fight himself, remembering what he told Wilson in 1918 when he asked the country to elect a democratic congress that would stand by him.

Republican candidates feel they need Coolidge to lean on. They are working with guile and force to tug him in. Elements of controversy are developing out of this situation.

Senator William H. Butler, of Massachusetts, chairman of the republican national committee, undertook to clear this up today but only succeeded in making it more foggy.

"Do you think President Coolidge is the issue?" he was asked.

"Personally, I think it is the duty of all republicans to stand by the president and the administration," he replied.

"What do you think is the paramount issue?"

"I like to think about prosperity," he answered. "We also have to keep in mind the achievements of the administration in executive affairs and the desire to continue the policies of the republican party."

Butler said some of the features of the cotton tariff should be increased to help New England textile industries. But he did not know whether anything in this direction could be done at the coming short session of congress.

Guilty Plea on Man-Slaughter Charge Draws Fine and Sentence on Chaingang.

Hule Reeves charged with involuntary manslaughter in connection with the death on March 21 of Joseph Finn, of Detroit, entered a plea of guilty Wednesday before Judge E. D. Thomas in Fulton superior court and was fined $150 and sentenced to serve 12 months on the chaingang, the sentence being suspended upon payment of the fine.

Reeves was named in an indictment charging three counts returned by the Fulton county grand jury on March 21, alleging that Finn was crushed to death beneath a "white-way" post on Spring street, struck by an automobile driven by Reeves, who was operating the machine while under the influence of liquor and was driving on the right hand side of the street.

The case had been placed on the criminal court calendar more than a half dozen times but each time was postponed.

Finn, and a brother were in Atlanta en route to Lakeland, Fla., to visit their parents. They had stopped in Atlanta to spend the night when the accident occurred.

William Schley Howard, Atlanta attorney, represented Reeves.

SNELLING ATTENDS SAVANNAH MEETING

Athens, Ga., September 28.—(AP)—Chancellor Charles M. Snelling of the University of Georgia, has gone to Savannah, where he will attend a meeting of the trustees of the Georgia Industrial School for Colored Youth in connection with the selection of a new president for that institution. The "Monkey Drill" squad of the University of Georgia is also in Savannah for a demonstration the first part of the week, and Chancellor Snelling will be in attendance at that performance.

Election of Dr. Hardman Would Encourage Industry, Editor Says in Statement

Sandersville Newspaper Man Tells Voters Holder's Election Would Drive Out Capital.

Gordon S. Chapman, editor of The Sandersville Progress, in a statement from Hardman headquarters Wednesday pointed out that Georgia "once having overcome the blight and ill-advised flight of 1906 to drive foreign capital out of Georgia should never risk Holder in the governor's chair at this time."

Continuing the discussion of the campaign, Mr. Chapman said: "If Mr. Holder were elected governor, and he doesn't seem to have the remotest chance, and should he learn of a new industry trying to locate in Georgia he would promise it to a score of Georgia towns and probably drive the plant from the state, as the promoters could not wait for him for the award. The people of this state remember the blight and ill-advised flight made in 1906 to drive foreign capital from Georgia. Just at this time the state is in line for great industrial progress and development, new industries locating here every week. A $2,000,000 cement plant is being encouraged to locate in middle Georgia, but the promoters of this plant desire to know in advance the attitude of the state toward foreign capital. They want to know if they will be taxed out of business with a politician in the governor's chair, or if they will be given a fair and square deal in the hands of a business governor to continue this industrial development and Dr. Hardman would do everything in his power to build up our industries and develop our vast resources. However, this will never be done with machine politicians in charge.

Economy Emphasized.

"Georgia people want economy. The poor man wants the burden of tax lifted from his shoulders; the man who has accumulated assets that his funds not be looted by any lawyer, the business man asks that his organization be protected from undue penalties. The people want economy. Labor asks for needed relief and capital asks for reasonable protection. Both sides deserve to be heard, and what is more, both sides deserve to be answered. Dr. Hardman will be the friend of all of these interests."

"The voice of a business man does not always carry far; if he is a success he has had to train himself to think more than to talk. Dr. Hardman is not a lawyer, nor a politician, but is a successful business man capable of deciding important business and legislative matters for himself, instead of keeping a listening ear to the ground for the advice of politicians."

"Canards" Are Rapped.

"Various canards issued by Mr. Holder and his political advisers have all been nailed as false. One of the first false statements was the assertion that Dr. Hardman had promised the highway department to Governor Walker. Both Dr. Hardman and Governor Walker branded the statement as utterly false. Next came the statement that Governor Walker had appointed Hon. Hugh Dorsey as judge at the request of Dr. Hardman. Dr. Hardman and Mr. Dorsey both branded this canard as false."

"The statement that conditions were not all they should be at Dr. Hardman's cotton mill was branded as maliciously false by practically every employee of the mill. And to date every charge has been proven false and Dr. Hardman's sterling character remains unimpaired. Georgians are going to nominate him for governor next Wednesday because he is the best fitted man for the office."

DONEHOO REPLIES TO HOLDER CHARGE

"In talking about bull calves, counterpane, and 'poor widows' cows, John N. Holder is wasting time that he ought to use in explaining certain official acts of his own and in which the voters of Georgia are deeply concerned," says a statement issued Wednesday by Paul Donehoo, chairman of the Fulton County Hardman club.

"The people of Georgia are not interested whether or not Dr. Hardman gave J. J. Brown a bull calf, as Mr. Holder, in one of his recent speeches, says he did. They are not interested in whether or not a 'poor widow' a long time ago paid a doctor's bill with a milk cow, or whether another paid her bill with counterpane, the making of which was her vocation."

"But they are interested in machine rule in the state capital and in Mr. Holder's administration as head of the highway department, a position which he got as a defeated gubernatorial candidate in exchange for his throwing his influence to Tom Hardwick when Hardwick and Walker were engaged in a runner race for governor. Holder having emerged from the first primary election the third man from the top."

"To be more specific, they would be interested very much in hearing about those things that he did not use $500 of the state's money to influence legislation in behalf of his notorious 'midnight bill,' that he did not use $500 of the state's money with which to pay a personal gunboat bill, the money being kept out of the treasury for something like nine months; that he did not clandestinely alter the minute records of the secretary of the highway board in such a way as would have given him absolute and despotic one-man control of the highway department; that he did not, by his signature, condone pay roll padding in the department, about which he knew for four or five months without doing anything or saying a word about it; that after a certain capital employee was discharged for gross inefficiency Mr. Holder did not 'take care' of him by putting him in a responsible and high-salaried position in the highway department at East Point."

"The people have a right to know about those things, they are legitimate questions for Mr. Holder to be called upon to discuss in his campaign speeches. But Mr. Holder, instead of discussing them, sidesteps them, and in trying to make political issues out of a bull calf and a milk cow and a widow's counterpane he is foundering and floundering about like a freshly-landed carp. And while he is taking his campaign so seriously and is in such evident distress, the thinking people of Georgia are only laughing at him."

well known that the "friends of Senator Watson will resent the efforts of The Atlanta Journal to mislead voters into believing that Dr. Hardman criticized him or cast any reflection upon his memory."

"I am now calling on The Atlanta Journal to correct the misquotation of the speech of Dr. Hardman, and sending to John I. Kelly, one of Mr. Holder's supporters, a telegram requesting him to correct the misstatement made by him on the subject at Carnesville on Monday."

Symphony Concert Ticket Sales Increasing Each Day

Sale of memberships for the 1926-27 season of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra association is proceeding daily with a response greater than for any of the preceding three years of the orchestra's existence, officials in charge reported Wednesday.

The first concert, which is scheduled for Sunday, November 14, is expected to tax the capacity of Loew's Grand theater, where concerts are given. Owing to the fact that seats will not be sold on Sundays, it is necessary for all who wish to attend to secure reservations by obtaining membership in the symphony association, which may be done any day at Phillips and Crew Piano company, corner of Peachtree and Ellis streets.

The orchestra this year is vastly improved over previous seasons and, in addition, some of the finest artists of the day, both vocal and instrumental, have been secured as guest artists for the different concerts.

Guest artists for the November 14 concert will be Kathryn Meisle, the famous contralto of the Chicago Civic Opera company, an American singer whose career has been a veritable triumphal parade ever since her debut as "Erda" in "Siegfried" in the fall of 1923.

Membership in the association, entitling the holder to two seats in the orchestra at each of the eight concerts in the series, may be secured for $10. Single seats are $10. Large seats are $12 or two for $20, while the special student rate, for the balcony, arranged particularly for students in Georgia institutions of higher learning and in the local colleges and high schools, are priced $6 or two for $10.

Mrs. George Walker, secretary of the symphony association, may be reached at the box office every day.

HARDMAN HITS 'SLUR' CHARGES

Alex S. Chamlee makes public a telegram Monday from Dr. L. G. Hardman, in which he emphatically denies having made any criticism of the late Senator Thomas A. Watson in his speech in Sylvester or Moultrie, or cast any reflection whatsoever upon his memory.

The telegram from Dr. Hardman to Mr. Chamlee follows:

"In pressuring the passage of the legislation I have been instrumental in getting passed in the course of my addresses at Sylvester and Moultrie, I spoke of the law-making provision for teaching agriculture and civil government and stated we had no opportunity to be informed as to the political doctrines of our state and nation except during campaign in which Mr. Watson and others brought to our attention the principles of democracy in which we believe. I had no thought of any unkind remark or criticism. Thomas A. Watson endorsed this bill in his magazine. You can use this as you think best."

"L. G. HARDMAN."

Further commenting on the matter, Mr. Chamlee said that long distance communication with the phone with a number of the most prominent and influential citizens of Worth county reveals the fact that the statement made by Dr. Hardman in his speech at Sylvester, instead of being the slightest degree a criticism of or a reflection upon the late Senator Watson, was very highly complimentary.

Mr. Chamlee called attention to the long and intimate friendship that existed between Dr. Hardman and the late Senator Watson, which was so

BUCKHEAD BAPTISTS DISCHARGE MINISTER

Efforts of the board of deacons of the Buckhead Baptist church to oust the Rev. J. H. Fuller from the pulpit of the church Wednesday night met with success when the congregation assembled in conference, passed resolutions declaring the pastorate vacant effective November 1, according to a statement by L. A. Davis, chairman of the board of deacons.

This action of the church climaxed a long fight against the pastor by the board of deacons, a fight brought about by alleged lack of leadership on the part of Dr. Fuller with consequent falling off of membership and financial support.

By the same action which declared the pastorate vacant, the board of deacons, who resigned recently when Dr. Fuller refused to resign the pulpit voluntarily, were reinstated to their positions in the church. Resolutions passed by the conference gave Dr. Fuller a vacation on full pay until November 1, when steps will be taken to fill the vacancy.

Complaints of the board of deacons in the matter, according to Mr. Davis, were to the effect that plans for erecting a new church for the congregation failed through lack of leadership, the deacons looking to the pastor for their leadership. In the broadening of the church, the church membership, attendance and finances all have fallen off greatly during Dr. Fuller's pastorate, and the board of deacons wants another man with leadership enough to build up the church and carry out the building of the new structure, Mr. Davis said.

Dr. Fuller came to the Buckhead church two years ago from Piedmont, Ala. Deacons of the church are A. M. "Lonnie" Smith, W. C. Mayville, Frank O. Cooper, F. B. Naff, John W. Elliott, J. E. Ragsdale, George Mathieson, Henry W. Roddy, J. E. Andrews, George W. Jenkins, and J. O. Pinner and Mr. Davis, chairman.

Dr. Fuller was asked to resign the pulpit voluntarily, but he refused to do so.

The matter of Coolidge's participation is important among politicians because of what it may lead to. Those who want him to get out of the country and help them are carrying privately that he is so interested in keeping himself unspattered for re-nomination that he is afraid to go out and help his party candidates who need it. This situation is generating some undercurrents which are bound to hurt if the president seeks re-nomination two years hence.

Take Senator Watson of Indiana.

Pioneer "Boys" Turn Back GATHERING WILL BE BRILLIANT AFFAIR Pages of Time at Dance

BY W. F. CRUSSELLE.

The meeting of the Pioneer School Boys' club at the Henry Grady hotel next Tuesday night will be the big event of the season, "old boys" leaders predict.

Interest is increasing and as the matter develops there comes an enthusiasm over it that is irresistible.

Not only do they anticipate much pleasure from seeing each other again, which is always a joy, but they want to enjoy an old-fashioned "party" one more time. Just a plain regular party, not a reception stiff and formal, but a gathering that thrills like they felt when in other days they went with the "best girl" and saw all the fellows with their arms around the girls.

Warren Howard will be master of ceremonies when the dance begins and the piano removes years and turns back the tide of thought to real days that were in the long ago. His call of the figures will put springs in boys who thought they were done with such and tune up steps to keep pace with the figures.

John Clark, Herbert Brown, Henry Boorman and Ed C. Peters will assist as floor managers. With such a team and with the hearty response of the boys, who can say there will not be a dance that will be memorable.

Some of his friends had arranged for Everett Sanders, secretary to the president and former Indiana congressman, to make speeches for Watson in Indiana.

Sanders agreed and was preparing his speeches when Coolidge heard about it, and indicated he did not wish Sanders to engage in a stumping campaign, fearing that anything he said would be popularly construed as coming from the president himself. This has not tended to put Watson in the best frame of mind, although he is talking bravely on the stump of his loyalty to the administration.

How Coolidge should figure is understood to have been a subject of discussion at the white house conferences during the last few days. Butler was there for breakfast and luncheon today, and Senator Thigpen, chairman of the senatorial campaign committee, was there for dinner two nights ago.

STATEMENTS ISSUED BY PARTY LEADERS

Washington, September 29.—(AP)—Another reminder that a congressional election is in the offing was heard in the capital today from both the republican and democratic camps.

After two visits to the white house, Chairman Butler, of the republican national committee, issued his recent pronouncements by others of that party in asserting that prosperity and endorsement of the Coolidge administration are the paramount issues in the present campaign.

William B. Wilson, democratic senatorial nominee in Pennsylvania, however, expressed a different view as to issues after a conference here with leaders of his party, asserting that in the Keystone state the voters would be asked to pass upon the expenditure of funds by Representative William S. Vare in obtaining the republican senatorial nomination last spring.

While Senator Butler declined to say what he discussed at the white house he asserted the campaign was in "fine shape" and that he expected a "satisfactory outcome," adding the Coolidge administration's policies again should be given the support of a republican senate and house.

Butler Claims Prosperity.
Mr. Butler denied the democratic contention that there is no prosperity in Massachusetts, said that all industry there was prosperous and asserted prohibition was not a principal issue in Massachusetts.

Mr. Wilson said Pennsylvanians would be called on by democratic candidates to "reject the shame that has been put upon the state by the corrupt campaign fund methods of the republican party candidates in the recent primary campaign."

"The people are determined to issue a new declaration against corruption in politics," he said, "that declaration will be issued on the second of next November through the defeat of Congressman Vare for the United States senate."

Mr. Butler, in his reference to the Massachusetts situation, said the tariff was arousing considerable interest and predicted some tariff schedules would be revised upwards at the short session.

RELICS REVEAL ESKIMO ORIGIN

is of theory that the ancestors of most of the aboriginal inhabitants of both North and South America came from the old world by way of Bering Strait, for no really old archaeological remains had been discovered. With polar bear skeletons, one of the greatest authorities on Eskimo anthropology, considered that the oldest house ruins he had observed by himself at Point Barrow, could not be certainly placed at more than 400 or 500 years, although they might be much older.

It long has been known that the Diomed Islands furnished halfway posts for traders from Asia, purchasing the furs of American Eskimos. That they have furnished a stepping stone between the continents in comparatively modern times is a certain inference; Mr. Jenness' discoveries prove that they furnished such a means of communication a century before Christ.

We reached the islands from Nome, Alaska, after three days of rough weather. We were met by Mr. Jenness and most of the Eskimo population. I ate breakfast at the collector's dwelling and gave him the news of the outside world. It was evident that Mr. Jenness was very ill.

After breakfast Mr. Jenness showed me his excavations, some of which he had just completed. The village is built above the old village on the only level building space on the island. I then got the following state-

"I have made one excavation on Little Diomed island, and two on Big Diomed. I found that the first ruin excavated was of a house which had been built upon the ruins of a second that must have been at least 800 years older than the first house, though the first house must have been very old. On further excavation I found a third house ruin under the two others, which would have been some 1,500 years old. I also found elsewhere archaeological specimens which I believe to be even older than any of these ruins. However, their age was not possible to prove geologically, as I found them in landslides which had come down the cliff."

"The importance of the discoveries on Bering Straits as bearing on the new world is that this is the gateway by which the population of the new world must be supposed to have entered."

While I have dated my findings 2,000 years back, and certainly much older than I had hoped to uncover on this preliminary expedition. However, I do not wish to make any more definite statements, for I want to go slow and to add later on rather than subtract."

ISSUANCE OF SCRIP FOR SCHOOLS SEEN

to do under the same set of laws is to provide 26 per cent of the entire revenue of the city as a minimum to the schools.

Request Denied.
"Persons on whom I relied to assist the schools in this crisis have declined on the grounds that the school department persists in over-spending its appropriation, and they feel that such an organization deserves no sympathy or aid," Mayor Sims said.

"This has been very discouraging, and I am not as confident now as I was Tuesday that we can get signatures the banks will honor. I, of course, will do everything in my power to prevent the closing of the schools and intend to keep trying to get the note through. If that is done, the crisis will be averted, if not then we will be forced to the issuance of scrip."

"We cannot help it if the school department continues to plunge into needless debt," Mr. Orme declared. "That department is the only one in the entire city government which operates as a separate entity. All the city government has to do is to produce the money after the board over-spends its allotment. The city just hasn't the money, and we are really up against it. We all want to help the schools, but it would be a shame to close them, but we have no control over the money, and it continues to be spent."

Eubanks
"If those who criticized the department and the school board really knew the facts they would be praising the board instead of taking the attitude they are now assuming," Dr. R. M. Eubanks, president of the board of education, said Wednesday night.

"If they would see what Atlanta is doing toward the education of its youth in comparison with other cities of lesser per capita wealth, they would be ashamed. I am not saying this in any spirit of criticism of those persons but to call their attention to the facts."

"The board has manipulated in every possible manner to save money, and we have saved. Operation of the schools is different from that of the police or other departments because there is an army of new recruits, for each year. This requires more teachers, more buildings and more coal to provide heat. We have done our best and the figures will tell that the schools have been economical and efficiently operated although in some cases the very bread of life has been denied Atlanta youngsters."

R. Graham West, city comptroller, Wednesday furnished the finance committee of council, which discussed the school situation informally, with a set of figures outlining the status of that department. He estimated the deficit in the department at $850,000.

Report of Comptroller.
"The city might as well face the fact," said Mr. West in his informal discussion, "that some way has got to be found to pay this note if the banks finally agree to advance the money. And you gentlemen, of course, realize that the board of education will be unable to meet it and to meet the current operating expenses next year."

"The board of education already is spending next year's money. This week they have bought several new automobiles which must be paid for next year; they are planning to carry the entire December pay roll, amounting to about $210,000, over into next year, and they have bought many supplies that will be paid for next year."

"With this money already spent, and with the heavy current expenses of next year, it is impossible to understand how the board is going to pay this $850,000 and still meet all other obligations."

"The answer is that they will not be able to do it and that next year the city will face the same situation, and that ultimately the only thing left to do will be to appeal to the legislature to allow a referendum on a special tax levy of 20 or 25 cents the 100 to wipe out the schools' deficit."

"The deficit that the board will face this year is estimated by them to be $731,000. In addition to this, they have not taken into account an earlier deficit of about $130,000 that will result from the failure to collect approximately $500,000 worth of tax in the fall. They simply will not get this revenue, which already has been anticipated and spent."

Mr. West also stated that he thought the present situation ultimately would result in passage of a law requiring the board of education to adopt a nonflexible budget each year, with sufficient funds "which cannot be touched for other purposes" set aside for teachers' salaries and other known expenses.

Several members of the finance committee expressed opinion that it was "unfair" to the general council of Atlanta for the board of education to overrun its allotment each year and "then expect the city to pay the difference."

SCHOOL COMMITTEE
WARNED OF CRISIS.
In regard to statements credited to Mayor Walter A. Sims and Councilman A. J. Orme charging the school board with mismanagement and extravagance, Mrs. R. L. Turman issued the following statement Wednesday night:

"Following the announcement of the school budget by the finance committee of the city council last fall, and prior to its acceptance in January by the council, Mrs. George M. Hoxworth, myself and other women interested in school activities, prevailed upon Dr. J. E. Turner, chairman of the school committee of the city council, to call a meeting of his committee. We appeared before this committee, which included Dr. Turner, F. A. Wardlaw, J. Allen Conch, C. D. Knight and Charles M. Ford, and told them we knew that the school finance budget as recommended by the finance committee was decidedly insufficient as it stood."

"We hoped that the school committee would aid in having the appropriation increased before passed on by council. We stated at the time that unless more money was allowed trouble, somewhat similar to what has now resulted and as has been experienced in previous years, would inevitably ensue."

SCHURMAN NOTES BETTER FRENCH GERMAN CONCORD

Washington, September 27.—(AP)—Recognition by Germany and France that constant discord is "not worth while" is leading them to mutual harmony, Jacob Gould Schurman, ambassador to Berlin, said today after a conference with President Coolidge.

The ambassador asserted the most amazing things he had noted was the "change in the psychological atmosphere between Germany and France," as the two governments, he said, were committed to friendly understanding and economic cooperation.

VIADUCTS' PLANS GIVEN APPROVAL

Unanimous indorsement by the city bond commission of the viaducts program and construction plans of the subcommittee was given at a meeting Tuesday at the City Hall.

Various committees reported, the viaduct project discussed and various phases of the proposed program taken up and discussed.

Minutes of the meeting which was attended by practically all members of the commission were made public immediately after the session, as follows:

"W. L. Hancock reported on the work of the school contact committee and asked for the ratification of several resolutions which had been previously passed and referred to the bond commission by the board of education. Among these were:

"Appropriation of additional lot for Hoke Smith high school.

"Relocation of Davis street school.

"Approval of the architect selected by board of education to handle school work.

"Appropriation for assistant to R. R. Ritchie so as to provide time for him to properly supervise construction work of the city schools being built under bond money.

"On account of limited time, several school resolutions were delayed until next meeting and carried over as unfinished business.

"The report of viaduct committee follows:

"A. D. Greenfield, chairman of the viaduct committee, in conjunction with William A. Hansell, chief of construction, reported on a number of conferences and discussions that have been held with engineers in connection with the construction of viaducts. After hearing Mr. Greenfield and Mr. Hansell, the committee as a whole unanimously voted to ratify the stand taken by the viaduct subcommittee, whose aim as stated by Mr. Greenfield, was that of building the viaducts to serve the city of Atlanta in the best possible way, keeping in mind not only the conditions of today, but also the conditions 25 and 30 years from today.

"The particular points of construction importance stressed by Mr. Greenfield and Mr. Hansell follow:

Increase in New Business Compels Laundry To Build

The Guthman laundry of 212 Whitehall street, corner Brotherton street, is erecting a large addition to its plant, adjoining on the Brotherton street side.

Additional space has been needed for some time according to Earl Knight, manager, who is very pleased with the ever increasing family wash business.

"This branch of our business," Mr. Knight said, "has been increasing steadily and we found that it was imperative to have more room, and then as soon as the building got under way, we are all eager to see it completed."

"Construction is proceeding at a rapid rate and the workmen are now preparing to roof it so that in a few more weeks, we can move in and so more room was what we needed, we expect to nearly double our work."

"Our new building will be almost fire proof, will be equipped with all the very latest equipment used in a modern laundry and we want our many friends to know that the Guthman laundry appreciates all former work they have given us and we, upon our part, are ever striving to render them the best service."

"We are very proud of our organization. With about 150 employees in all departments, everything runs along smoothly every employee in his respective department knows what to do and then does it."

"In our phone department, we claim to have two girls with a smile in their voice and some of our customers have told us that they have given us their work just to hear our girls talk over the phone."

"We also are greatly enlarging our delivery service, replacing most of our 20 medium size trucks with larger ones and this is a departure that will greatly facilitate our deliveries and lessen the trips for our outside men and get the laundry to all the homes in a little earlier."

Fletcher-Wilson Products Very Popular Once Used

No meal is a complete meal to the average American who likes and knows a good cup of coffee and Atlanta has in the Fletcher-Wilson brand known as the Luxury brand and coffee that "hits the spot." It is praised very highly by housewives that have recently began to serve it to their families and friends.

In addition to coffee this firm makes peanut butter and a high grade of mustard which also is put up under the name of Luxury brands, and the Atlanta manager M. S. Wigginton, can tell an interesting tale about the manufacture of his products—coffee, coming directly from the fields in Brazil, is toasted and roasted and distilled up right here, then labelled "Luxury"—and it's no misnomer—and presto, "it satisfies." Peanuts grown on Fletcher-Wilson farms are picked, shelled, cleaned, ground up and its ingredients of varying taste and food value, is made into the popular "Luxury" peanut butter at the Nashville, Tenn., home plant. "Luxury" mustard is manufactured in Atlanta, and goes into thousands of homes through the country, fresh, richly flavored and ready to be served in its many ways for the table.

Mr. Wigginton, at Tel. 3153, has an abundance of information regarding coffee, the value and different ways in which it may be used, and the meal, and peanut butter fits into the meal, and adds to the savory richness one finds absent when mustard is missing.

Housewives who are interested will find no better advice or more convincing and obliging officials than Fletcher-Wilson company employees.

A southern institution, founded in Nashville on a rock-bed of courtesy and service, it has reached into all sections of the globe and wherever discriminating people eat and drink, they grow to love the Fletcher-Wilson brand—all of the famous "Luxury" brand.

MINERS ARE SAVED FROM DEATH TOMB

ing the interminable hours of waiting for aid.

But despite this the captain, who has spent 35 years burrowing for iron in these hills, refused to be among the first to step into the cage. He insisted that his men go first. Urean was said to be on the verge of collapse, though able to stand after receiving first aid and a little food.

But all of the entombed miners will, with a few days' rest and food, be little the worse for their grueling experience underground, physicians believe. The painfully tedious process of lowering the victims from their perilous niche at the eighth level to secure footing of "H" shaft from where they were hoisted up was accomplished only after several hundred feet of shattered ladderway had been repaired. With the assistance of rescuers, including a force of first-aid men from the United States bureau of mines, all the men were able to climb down the steep incline to the waiting elevators. Specially constructed wire baskets, held in readiness, were not needed.

So enthused has the whole Goghie range become over the rescue that the various celebrations, public and private, are expected to continue for a week.

High officials of mining properties, congregated here from every range of the upper peninsula, plainly showed tonight a letdown from their six days of anxiety. For the first time they freely laughed an elated and swapped stories of their years of mining experience.

Gala Night in Ironwood.

It is a gala night, all of Ironwood joining in the joyful festivities in evidence about the firesides of the rescued 43. And the hero of the hour is George Hawes, safety expert for the Pullman company, Chicago, the first to reach the entombed men. Sharing the honors is Oscar Olson, chief engineer of the mine, who was close at Hawes' side when the latter, creeping perilously up the shattered "G" shaft by means of improvised rope ladders, landed at the treacherous eighth level and grasped the hand of Captain Thomas Trewartha, shift boss of the imprisoned men.

Twenty minutes later the whole of Ironwood began to pour over the red coated hills and swarm about the mine. Hawes, assuring himself that all the imprisoned men were not only alive but apparently enduring no severe suffering, had quickly made his way to the surface with the glad tidings.

Officials, taking Hawes' advice, immediately dispatched back orders that none of the entrapped men should attempt descent over the shaky ladders which had been, and quickly made his way to the surface with the glad tidings.

Lower left shows a bevy of young women, representing the Marietta high school P. T. A. Left to right is Miss Evelyn York, Miss Mable Story, teacher, Miss Marian Keith and Miss Ethelene Shaw. prison, would not warrant such exertion. Food and hot drinks, warm blankets and a supply of cigarettes were rushed down "H" shaft and in the "G" shaft runways to the little group of refugees.

Nurses and physicians, who, for six days have maintained constant vigil at the mouth of the shaft, quickly followed the food to the underground prison. Preparations were immediately under way to hoist the men to the surface. It was not considered wise to undertake this until stancher supports were placed in the shaft and this, officials declared, would probably take six hours.

O. C. Davidson, general superintendent of the Oliver Mining company, and Pontecost Mitchell, a vice president, were the first officials to get the word that the long suspense was over. They rushed to "H" shaft and were on hand to receive Hawes and Olson when they stepped out of the hoisting cage.

"It is wonderful," was all Mr. Davidson could say as he grasped Hawes' hands.

Tells Story of Rescue.

Captain Gustav Erickson, one of the staunchest believers that the men would not perish before being dug out, hurried up and then, to the three, Hawes related the story of the rescue. Mine police, scouting already the vanguard of the host that was soon to descend upon the mine, hastily encircled the pit with rope, keeping the crowds back so that the rescue could work. And this was done none too soon. Fifteen minutes later several thousand men, women and children were clinging to the barrier, eager for every crumb of information about their loved ones. It was after cutting and digging their way upward to the 15th level, 800 feet below the trapped miners, that Hawes and Olson and their assistants came upon the first evidences that they were getting closer to their goal.

Here and there they spied an empty dinner pail, swinging from a puting rock or a cedar stake, where they had tumbled after the cave in on Friday.

"I began working my way slowly up the shaft as I am of slender build than Olson," said Hawes. "At the 12th level I managed to scramble into the shaft and rapped eight times."

13 Answering Taps.

"Faintly but distinctly came 13 answering taps from the chasm yawning above me. I knocked 13 times and right away came the answering pecks against the iron piping. I knew I could not be mistaken then. I threw all caution to the winds, determined to reach them and literally inched my inch crept a tortuous pathway upward. Pretty soon I heard a faint 'Hello' and in a minute I made out a shadowy form silhouetted against the bare rock by the glimmer of a miner's lantern."

Hawes made the final stretch by means of a rope ladder he managed to swing across the shaft.

"And there stood Captain Trewartha, a little grin on his face," related Hawes.

"They're all safe!" were the captain's first words to me."

Beside Trewartha, Hawes said, were two of his men. Those three were on sentry duty. The remaining 40 men were asleep, the captain said, leading the way back into the cavern.

"And how those poor fellows did crowd around me," said Hawes.

Then Hawes rubbed his shoulder and smiled. "Yes, and some of them almost beat me to death, pounding me on the back, so glad were they to see me."

Show Rescues Prison.

Hilarious, now that the danger was over, they showed Hawes about their prison where for six days they had subsisted solely on water, and on the few scraps that remained in their dinner pails when the crash came.

"Here," and one of the men pointed to a darkly suspicious mess simmering in a tobacco can, "here is our restaurant."

"It's birchbark," explained Captain Trewartha, "some of the boys thought maybe a little bark tea might warm us up some. Yes, we're pretty hungry, but all the fellows have kept up wonderfully well."

"I ain't so hungry at that. It's tobacco I want. Haven't got a cigarette on you, pardners?" One of the miners cut in plaintively upon Captain Trewartha's exposition of the bark tea.

Hawes dipped desperately through his water-soaked overall but could only fish up a lone cigar. This the tobacco-famished man grabbed eagerly.

"When I left them they were passing that cigar around a puff to a man," said Hawes.

Captain Trewartha explained that a goodly supply of carbide and a 2-gallon can of kerosene had furnished them light and that abundant water always courses down the runways of "G" shaft.

Heard Rumbles of Blast.

He said faint rumbles from the blast set off by the rescuers had reached them in their dusky prison and had served to lighten the hearts of his men. Being miners, they well

Fair weather with no change in temperature is today's weather forecast by C. F. von Herrmann, head of the local United States weather bureau.

The slight rise in temperature following the short cool spell Monday and Tuesday is likely to hold its own, as there is no cold weather anywhere in sight for Atlanta and vicinity, the meteorologist said. Wednesday's temperature ranged between a minimum of 67 degrees and a maximum of 80 degrees. The predicted range of the mercury for today is 68 to 85 degrees.

oughly disguised that he could not have recognized his own sister under the circumstances but declared that Mrs. McPherson's ankles resembled those of the Carmel woman, and her carriage, from and general appearance were the same.

Mrs. Wiseman is the next important witness scheduled to be called. She appeared in court Wednesday wearing dark goggles and with her hat pulled down over her face, the disguise that "Miss X" used.

Benedict was expected to be questioned as to whether he could identify her in this outfit as Ormiston's companion.

Mrs. V. Wiseman is expected to tell of being hired and coached by the evangelist to produce "Miss X," for which she was to receive $5,000.

On her testimony hinges much of the state's effort to prove that Mrs. McPherson, her mother, Mrs. Kennedy, Mrs. Wiseman, Ormiston and "John Doe" Martin were involved in a criminal conspiracy to defraud justice by preparing false evidence.

William H. Carter, foreman of the discharged grand jury which investigated the disappearance of the evangelist, was called unexpectedly as a witness. His testimony was brief and was designed to establish the state's legal foundation for the charges of perjury and conspiracy.

Rich's Golden Harvest Sale!

Begins Friday, Oct. 1st
Ten Wonder Days

RICH HARVEST SALE WILL OPEN FRIDAY

What will the harvest be, ladies and gentlemen? There is a wide choice—pick your window at Rich's department store. Pileups in China—grapes in Italy—tulips in Holland—wheat, cotton and tobacco in the United States—rice in Japan—and so on, in gorgeous colors, the harvest of the world is portrayed in the show windows of Rich's fronting on Alabama and Forsyth streets.

It is in celebration of Rich's gold on harvest sale, which begins Friday morning, to last 10 days, during which the men, women and children of Atlanta and surrounding territory are going to reap a rich harvest of bargains from the counters and shelves of any and every department in the great store, according to the management.

The most striking thing about Rich's show windows this morning is the fact that there isn't a single piece of merchandise—not even a shoe lace—in a single one of the 10 large windows. Eyes long used to looking into show windows and seeing suits, cloth, furniture, etc., arranged in attractive styles, will blink unbelievably when they peer through Rich's large plate glass windows. Instead of the accustomed articles, one will see in each window a beautiful picture, set in an equally as beautiful frame, in which the harvest in some country is portrayed in rich coloring.

It is an education in itself to begin at the window next to The Constitution building and inspect every window, on around to the last one on the Forsyth street side. The picture in each shows the product for which the country is most famous at harvest time.

No merchandise will be placed in the windows at all today. But, Friday morning, when the public answers the invitation to the golden harvest sale, each harvest tableau will form a beautiful background for articles which are to be found on one of Rich's six floors, including basement.

Each day the windows will be changed.

According to executives of the store, the sale is expected to be the greatest in Rich's history. More than 200 salespeople have been employed to augment the already large staff.

During the 10 days the sale will last, $400,000 worth of merchandise will be offered in Rich's 70 department.

The windows were prepared under the direction of John Mackey, display manager of Rich's.

Although nearly $15,000 has been sent from this city for Florida storm relief, Atlanta has not finished its answer to the appeal of the hurricane-stricken state.

Indications were Wednesday that Atlanta's contribution would reach a much higher total before the week ended, as donations poured into various agencies. The Constitution Wednesday received $375 from the Citizens club, and $5 from E. A. Townsley, of 491 West Mitchell street.

The Colored Baptist Ministers' association announced Wednesday that its members had subscribed a total of $100.76 to the cause, $17 of which had previously been reported. Following is the list of contributions: Wheat Street church, $25; Ebenezer Street, $10; Reed Street, $10; Beulah, $5; Calvary, $5; Bethlehem, $5; Friendship, $5; Antioch, $3; Second St. Olive, $2; Little Friendship, $1. Personal contributions: The Keys, A. D. Williams $2; E. P. Johnson $1; W. M. P. King $1; E. D. Florence $1; C. H. Ball $1; J. H. Cunningham $1; C. N. Ellis $1; W. T. Tate $1; N. T. Thompson $1; M. W. White $1; E. D. Lawson $1; C. H. Powell $1.

Robert S. Parker, chairman of the Atlanta chapter of the Red Cross, stated Wednesday that a check for $6,000 was mailed Tuesday, bringing the paid-in total to $13,000. Approximately $10,000 has been pledged, which is subject to collection. In addition to these amounts, Mr. Parker said, several large contributions are expected in the next day or so.

Contributions will be received by The Constitution, Red Cross and practically all other agencies which have volunteered to be available, as long as there are contributors.

"My Life Story"

Written by Rudolph Valentino

TENDER DEVOTION TO LOVED MARIA SHOWN BY STAR

26TH INSTALLMENT.

My sister, Maria, was in France when the war broke out, before her death, quite a little while before, my mother had gone to France for her health. Three years later she passed away, and my sister, only 30 years of age, was left there alone, with everything to attend to.

All that loneliness and trouble and changed her a great deal. She was a girl when I left her, and I found her a serious young woman, with some of the light quenched in her dark eyes.

Maria and Natacha and I finally settled down to a long talk, involving plans for Maria's future. We decided that she must go to Nice, to Mr. and Mrs. Hudnut, and rest for a year at least. While she is with them, she will go up to the mountains or another change. She is not very strong in constitution, and I told her firmly that she must not think of working again, for a year at least.

Working Hard.
She has been holding down the job of general secretary to a large firm of silk and cotton manufacturers, and it was a position of trust, responsibility and hard work for a girl of 24.

She is a hard worker, and with that and the damp climate, her health has suffered terribly. Now that I am in a position help her, I am going to see that she gets on her feet, so to speak, before she undertakes anything again.

She told me that she wants to do something; that she would loathe being idle, and in that I agreed with her. She is much like the American girls in her desire to be doing something—something on her own account.

Craves Independence.
However comfortable I might make her, she wouldn't feel the same as if she were doing something for herself by her own efforts. A girl is like a man in that respect nowadays. After she and worked for six years, she would never be content sitting around in idleness.

Natacha and I told her to think it over during this coming year of quiet and rest and try to decide what she would most like to do in order to be independent and busy. Then I want her to rely on her own strength and be self-sufficient. I believe in that for women. Quite in the same way I believe in it for men.

But the first thing she has got to do is to get her health in shape. One works on a shaky foundation when one works with an enfeebled body. There is no economy in that.

A Year of Rest.
We finally concluded that part of the conversation by the decision for Maria to stay a year with the Hudnuts resting and vacationing, and at the end of that time I would help her, if necessary, to get into the kind of work she should eventually decide upon.

Of course, she asked me all kinds of questions about my work, and I told her the story of my arrival in America, the days of starvation and discouragement, the beginning that seemed to get nowhere, the final landing on my feet. She wanted to know all about how pictures are made, about the stars, the directors, the studios.

She wanted to hear all about June Maribelle and the part she had played, and play a so definitely, in my "discovery," and then I told her that she had never seen a picture of mine, at least. She intimated that she got most of her knowledge from the magazines and newspapers. Like most of my sex, I am, I suppose, neither a frequent nor a very prolific letter writer.

Her First Film.
The third day we were in Milan I arranged to have my sister see "The Four Horsemen." I asked an official, connected with the industry to have a copy of the film shown here, and, through his courtesy, it was run for her. But the projection room had no light, and the picture was so badly out that my aunt, who was with us, said she was glad she had seen it in Rome.

But my sister, none too critical, was delighted. She said, she naturally looked at a situation and respect. "The Four Horsemen" had finally done the trick for me, where my early smoking and other feasts had dimly failed.

ARTIST SERIES TICKET SALE TO CONTINUE

So many requests have been received by the Southern Musical bureau for season tickets to its artist series since public sale closed last week that the management has announced that a few seats will be kept on sale at Phillips & Crew piano store and may be had by calling for them there between 2 and 5 o'clock each afternoon.

Although there has been a splendid sale, there are still plenty of choice seats available at the season ticket rate, and these may be had at any time before the single admission tickets for Will Rogers and the De Reszke singers go on sale October 16. Out-of-town orders will be filled as received at the office of the Southern Musical bureau, on the twelfth floor of the Wynne-Cloughton building.

Russell Bridges received a wire from Will Rogers on his arrival on the Leviathan from his tour of Europe the past summer, stating that he will be ready with a brand-new kit full of stories to take up his lecture tour early next week, which will bring him to Atlanta soon. He said that his associates, the De Reszke singers, were rehearsing and tuning up for the long tour.

UPSHAW EXPENSE ACCOUNTS DIFFER, RECORDS REVEAL

Congressman William D. Upshaw spent $4,800 in his unsuccessful campaign for reelection, according to a report filed by telegram by the congressman Tuesday night with the clerk of the DeKalb superior court and made public Wednesday. In this report Upshaw said $1,200 of this fund was contributed by friends but he made no list of his contributors.

In a report filed Wednesday with the clerk of the Fulton superior court by T. E. Whitaker, campaign manager for Upshaw, the total expenditures are given as $3,520, and it was said that $2,316 was contributed by friends, of which sum $1,000 was listed as being contributed by William G. McAdoo, former secretary of the treasury.

Tuesday was the last day in which expense accounts of candidates could be filed to comply with the law covering this subject. Mayor Walter A. Sims, of Atlanta, and L. J. Steele, of DeKalb, other congressional candidates, filed their statements Tuesday.

In the race for state house offices, George H. Carswell, candidate for governor, was the last to file his expense account Tuesday. He reported expenditures of $8,537, with contributions of $6,737, made largely by Carswell clubs in Bibb, Wilkinson and Houston counties.

Mr. Whitaker, in explaining the differences between the figures he filed and those filed by Congressman Upshaw said the additional money listed by Upshaw probably was spent prior to the time Mr. Whitaker entered the campaign.

"I became campaign manager after the campaign had been in progress some time," he said. "Congressman Upshaw was under the impression that no expense account was required from him and it was due to this misapprehension that he did not file his figures earlier. The sum I filed represented the expenditures made through me and was to the best of my knowledge and belief. The additional money probably was expended personally by Mr. Upshaw."

FURY OF HURRICANE TOLD BY ATLANTAN UPON RETURN HERE

T. M. Watts, of the McMillan Publishing company, is another Atlantan who had the misfortune to pass through the Miami hurricane—and the good fortune to pass through it unscathed.

Buildings rocked and creaked in the terrific wind, as signs, porches, awnings and debris of every description hurtled through the streets, driven before a 150-mile wind and a sheet of water that was traveling as fast through necessity, he said.

Mr. Watts, who did not leave Miami until Monday night after the storm, declared that the hurricane's devastation can not be over estimated.

Local Prep Teams Open Season Friday

BY BEN COTHRAH.

Prep coaches are putting the finishing touches on their teams, getting ready for the opening of the prep season tomorrow afternoon.

Final scrimmages were held at most of the schools Wednesday afternoon, and coaches will finish up the training this afternoon with light signals, punting, passing and lectures.

Jack McLeskey, captain of last year's Boys' High team, and Razin, a guard, returned this week, and with their return completed the list of veterans that will give the Purple team the same line that played all last season.

Breezy Wynn, veteran fullback, is strengthening the backfield considerably, and Coach Doyl has several good men to fill up the other vacancies.

Armin Waugh, first Smith back, is on the injured list and will not be able to play in a Friday game. He pulled a ligament in his leg and Coach Tolbert stated that it would keep him out for several weeks. The rest of the squad is in fine shape.

Amusements

The Rialto.

"The Lady of the Harem," the feature of the Rialto theater, has one of the finest casts of any picture produced in recent months. The featured male roles are enacted by Ernest Torrence and William Collier, Jr. The principal female players are Greta Nissen and Louise Fazenda.

Especially strong is the supporting company, which includes such names as André de Branger, Chester Conklin and others.

The Forsyth.

No play in recent months has proved more worthwhile or more attractive than "Applesauce" is now doing at the Forsyth theater. It is a great play in which two stars of the company, James Cagney and Edith Lillian Wilcox, are starring.

Gus Forbes has a fine role as Pa Robinson and the other characters know the kind of entertainment Gus provides in a good role.

All next week "Dancing Mothers," another fine offering, will be played.

Loew's Grand.

Rolling college songs and dances are features of the program played by French Light's "Applesauce" orchestra, from Johns Hopkins university, which is the headline at Loew's Grand theater this week. The college present a clever program which includes comedy songs and sketches.

Another popular act on the bill is that of Harry "Hickey" LeVan, who is assisted by pretty Lettie Rolles, in a laughable skit. "Other acts on the bill are Mary Davis, prima donna, in a pleasing song program; Savoy and Mann in a funny skit with music and the Chandon Trio in a sensational aerial act. Norma Slesinger and Conrad Naezel are stars in "The Waning Sex," the Loew picture.

One of the gorgeous gowns worn by Corinne Griffith in her newest photoplay, "The Best Bad Man," which is delighting crowded houses at the Metropolitan theater this week, has a long train made up of 1,500 ermine tails and a train of solid pearls. Her role is that of the Grand Duchess Tatiana, and her portrayal of the character is one of the most beautiful that she has given the screen stage. Leide and his Metropolitan orchestra, a Hal Roach comedy and a news reel are other prominent features.

Anna Q. Nilsson is coming to the Metropolitan theater next week in her latest feature photoplay, "Nobody," which is hailed in picture circles as one of the best vehicles Miss Nilsson has had in many months.

The Howard.

The Howard theater offering this week is "The Campus Flirt," which is a comedy. "The Campus Flirt" concerns itself with the activities of a college girl who "high lones" everyone falling to come up to her own ridiculous standard. The girl's subsequent treatment at the hands of her fellow students provides one with a laugh each second.

This week's Public review is Paul DeWitt's "Ballads of Yesterday." Howard patrons will remember Mr. DeWitt as the producer of "Southern Melodrama" and "Spanish Nights," both of which scored a great success several weeks ago.

Tenth Street Theater.

Given five minutes to live, alone with the man who has been commissioned to kill her, a beautifully groomed Russian aristocrat looks toward a gorgeous room, deserted by plundering revolutionists. This is one of the great central situations of Cecil B. DeMille's production, "The Sign of the Cross," which is playing at the new Tenth Street theater at the corner of Peachtree and Tenth streets.

William Boyd, Elinor Fair, Theodore Kosloff and Julia Faye are featured.

West End Theater.

The popular and hard-boiled Tom Mix and his pal Tony are the stars of "The Best Bad Man," a thrilling western which is the feature at the West End theater today and tomorrow. In "The Best Bad Man" Tom Mix is seen as the fast riding quick shooting cowboy who teaches a few bad men some tricks in the bad man business. He is supported by an able cast.

Tudor Theater.

Opening today at the Tudor is Tom Tyler's latest western photoplay, "The Masquerade Bandit," the story of a man who was willing to become an outlaw to help his friend and who gets into all sorts of mixups doing it. Finally forcing a fight on a mountain top to avenge an act of treachery.

For thrills and action the picture "The Masquerade Bandit" will sell out. It has an equal, the action starting from the first and never letting up.

On the same program with "The Masquerade Bandit" is "His Own Lawyer," a Fox comedy and International News.

Rogers Will Stay With Team Despite Mother's Death

Mrs. Hornsby's Last Wish Is That Her Son 'Carry on' in Series

Gloom Pervades Camps of Both Yankees and Cardinals. Funeral Will Be Delayed Until After Titular Battles.

Austin, Texas, September 29.—(AP)—Mrs. M. D. Hornsby died here this afternoon happy in the knowledge that her son, Rogers Hornsby, had carried his St. Louis Cardinals to a National league pennant. Her hope that she might be spared long enough to see her son in the triumph of world's series play, however, remained unfulfilled.

With the true devotion of a mother, Mrs. Hornsby insisted during her critical illness that Rogers remain in New York to prepare his team for the opening game of the series Saturday.

The Cardinals manager had made tentative arrangements to bring his games played there, but a week ago it became evident her condition was too serious for her to undergo the trip. Mrs. Hornsby repeatedly expressed the hope that she might live until the conclusion of the series. She was confident that St. Louis would win.

For eleven years she had been an invalid, and much of the time was spent in bed.

Left a widow many years ago with five small children, she reared all to maturity. About four years ago, however, one of her sons was shot to death in a restaurant at Fort Worth, Texas, and two years ago another died after an operation for appendicitis. The loss of these sons contributed to her decline.

Funeral arrangements had not been announced tonight.

In compliance with Mrs. Hornsby's dying wish, the family planned to delay her funeral until after the world's series, when Rogers, who is the youngest son, can attend the services.

Everett Hornsby, another son, arrived at his mother's bedside last night from Tulsa, Okla.

Mrs. Hornsby was the daughter of Ed H. Rogers, Texas pioneer, a nephew of General Albert Sidney Burleson, a noted figure in Texas history.

Forty-five years ago she married A. E. Hornsby, grandson of Reuben Hornsby, first white settler in that part of the Austin colony which is now Travis county. Her husband died in 1898.

Four sisters were at the death bed. She is also survived by four brothers.

ROGERS DECIDES TO STAY WITH CLUB.

By FRANK GETTY.

New York, September 29.—Grief-stricken over the death of his mother, Rogers Hornsby, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, has decided that duty demands that he remain in New York and lead his club into the world's series next Saturday.

After spending several hours alone, Hornsby, whose first inclination had been to hurry to his home in Austin, Texas, announced at his headquarters Wednesday night that he would stay with the team that will have such vital need of his leadership during the series with the New York Yankees.

"As it was my mother's dying request that I remain with the team until after the series," Hornsby said Wednesday night, "as hard as it will be for me, I have decided to carry out her wishes."

"My family also has requested me to carry out her wish and I promised that her remains will be kept until after the series."

Thus was reached one of the most dramatic and heart-stirring decisions ever required of a baseball player on the eve of his entry into the climactic series of the season.

Torn with doubt as to which course to pursue, the St. Louis manager finally made up his mind and came from

CRIMSON TIDE OFF TONIGHT FOR VANDY

BY BOB MATHERNE.

University, Ala., September 29.—(Special).—Alabama's charge on Vanderbilt will begin here Thursday night when the Crimson men and the team of Coach Dan McGugin's Commodores. The Crimson will depart for the battle Saturday against Coach Dan McGugin's Commodores. The Crimson will depart for the battle Saturday against Coach Dan McGugin's Commodores.

It is a peculiar fact that six out of state men are on Bama's team this season. The past three years saw only two players: other than home-bred products on the team. This year Alabama has a Texan in Rivera, a Georgian in Taylor, two Tennesseans in Hott and Skidmore, and a Kentuckian in Holmes and an Arkansian in Caldwell on the team.

The rest of the squad are all Alabama boys.

It is hardly doubtful whether Wallace Wade will elect to start a different team from the one he started last Friday against Millsaps, yet those starters are by no means assured of being among the first eleven when Alabama plays Vanderbilt. The tackles, guards and center are almost certain of being manned by the same quartet that manned the position Saturday, but the backs and ends—well, any one of many may be called upon to play those positions.

The Crimson will return to the field this season, on ends and in the backfield, but the reserve is nothing startling. Reserves this season are weaker Alabama's team and also reduce the weight of the team. The speed, however, remains.

HAWK-EYE-ING SPORTS

BY DICK HAWKINS.

DesJardins Truly a Champ.

If we have indicated in this column that Pete DesJardins, the national swimming champion, is a little more than human in his work from the spring board, we are now even more convinced of this fact after witnessing the exhibition given by this "half-pint" youth at the Atlanta Athletic club Wednesday night.

Pete thrilled more than a hundred spectators with his diving feats and the comment heard on every side was the same, "How does he do it?" A question unanswerable but most natural.

The diving champ is also somewhat of a comedian and he drew a laugh from the spectators with his antics of mimicry in the water. His best impersonation was that of the famous swimmer, Johnnie Weismuller, but Pete went all through the Weismuller motions without moving so much as an inch in the water. It is not difficult to "run without moving" on dry land but just try and go through all the motions of swimming without moving forward. Well, Pete did it—believe it or not.

A. J. Henderson, a teammate of Pete's on the Miami aggregation, joined with the champion in a bit of funning which also drew a laugh and it was truly clever. Pete went through all the antics of a drowning man and "A. J." gallantly went to his rescue only to be pushed from the water himself by the supposed recipient of his life-saving efforts.

The youthful Henderson also exhibited some prowess himself as a swimmer by defeating Dick McKinstry, one of the A. A. C. stars, in a close 50-yard race.

Buster Harris and Bill Murray, two diving aces of the A. A. C. team, did their part by exhibiting some perfect dives along with the champion. All in all it was a very interesting evening for the spectators and the smooth manner in which the program was run off is a credit to Bernard Neal and Steve Hartney, who had charge of the event.

Robert Tyre, Attorney.

As was stated exclusively in the columns of The Constitution Wednesday morning, Bobby Jones will turn from shooting birds to shooting—well he will learn the art of oratory, which is the stock-in-trade of all lawyers.

This is interesting to all who know Bobby and there is no question that he will make a good attorney as well as a golfer, for the fighting spirit which made Bobby the master of wood and iron will go a long way toward making him a master of words and irony, two important items in the courtroom or in the office.

But how about his golf? Well, that is a question. One thing is certain, at least Bobby says himself that he will play but little golf while school is on. He expects to confine his golf to Sunday mornings during the school term. On the surface it might seem that this would have a bad effect on his game but we, for one, are convinced that—whether Bobby will admit it or no—he had just a little too much golf this summer, and the rest will do him more good than harm.

Another Iowa Upset.

Comes a story out of Iowa where corn is a crop, not a beverage, which may be taken as a warning by college coaches (but we hope not).

The hero (?) is a lowly sophomore in a Des Moines high school who aspired to wear moleskins on the gridiron and when denied that privilege by a hard-hearted coach he proceeded to prove to the mentor that while he might not be a football player he was no mean pugilist. In short—he gave the instructor a thorough licking and then disappeared.

Now yellow may be a nice color for dandelions but if the coach called this youngster "yellow," as is alleged, he used very poor judgement in his choice of pigimentary language.

This is not to be construed as commendatory of the student. Such conduct is not to be condoned or excused but the story deserves comment because of the very irony of the thing.

FROSH OPPOSE GREAT BATTLE BIRD VARSITY LOOMS SUNDAY IN SCRIMMAGE AT WEST END

BY ALTON REDFEARN.

With the Howard game just around the corner, the Stormy Petrels went through one of the hardest practice sessions Wednesday afternoon since the beginning of the practice season, scrimmaging practically the whole of the afternoon. The workout was not called until darkness intervened. The scrimmage found the Oglethorpe varsity pitted against the frosh eleven, the rats using the Howard field, the Junior Petrels strove hard to break through the first line, and save for a few occasions they found it a difficult problem. The varsity line was spilling the Froshman back line, the Froshman back line was spilling the varsity line, the varsity line was spilling the Froshman back line, the Froshman back line was spilling the varsity line.

The varsity offensive was working to perfection Wednesday. It was a frequent happening for the first string backs to break through the rat line for substantial gains. The work of Garlington, Bell and Shephard was outstanding in the backfield, several times making beautiful runs. The line plunging of Shephard was especially good.

Joe Hutson, varsity center, suffered a badly sprained knee early in the scrimmage yesterday and had to be removed from scrimmage. It is expected that he will be all right by Saturday, as he will have a day or so of light work between now and the game, allowing sufficient time for a sprain to heal.

An unusually hard workout is the order of practice for this afternoon at Oglethorpe, running the first string the most important part of the workout. Friday the Birds entrain for Birmingham, arriving there in time to go through a light workout that afternoon.

Commercial High, with a brand new football team, will open its 1926 season Friday afternoon with Canton High at Canton, Ga. It was announced Wednesday after Coach Maddox decided to turn out a football team for Commercial.

Four games have been scheduled by the Typists and tentative dates are pending with Locust Grove, Windsor High, Cartersville and several others who have not been heard from.

Those four already scheduled include Canton, Douglasville, Covington and Fulton High.

The team has been working out daily for the past four weeks at Grant Park under the direction of Coach Martin Maddox.

Commercial High is in the G. I. A. A. and the Atlanta prep league but has only participated in the basketball and baseball schedule for the past

CARDS BOAST BEST CATCHER IN BIG LOOPS

BY FRANK GETTY.

New York, September 29.—If there is one player likely to prove the deciding factor in the forthcoming world's series, it is Bob O'Farrell, of the Cardinals.

Bob is the St. Louis catcher—the best backstop in either league.

O'Farrell so far outclasses Hank Severid and Pat Collins, the catchers upon whom the Yankees must depend, that the preponderance of power in this department alone may turn the tide of battle.

Of course, Bob must do his stuff. His year's record, which shows him to have been one of the most valuable players in the National league, will do him no good in this short series against the Yankees. Many of the latter are veterans of several world's series, and that they will make life miserable for young Mr. O'Farrell goes without saying.

The Cardinal catcher played a three world's series game himself, while a member of the Chicago Cubs in 1918, but Bob was not the great backstop in 1921 until the present year. He has fallen off in his stick work, and lacks O'Farrell's ability to block runners off the plate and in handling throwers from the outfield.

Bob O'Farrell is a great backstop for steady his pitchers. He is not afraid to take chances, as his record of ten errors last year shows. But he has the confidence of the man who will be up on the hill hurling for St. Louis. A pitcher's confidence in his catcher is half his battle.

Hank Severid, who for nearly a dozen years played with the St. Louis Browns, is a steady, reliable catcher who has also been a hard hitter from 1921 until the present year. He has fallen off in his stick work, and lacks O'Farrell's ability to block runners off the plate and in handling throwers from the outfield.

At bat O'Farrell will hit with the best of them. He has contributed seven homers to the Cardinals' success this year, and while his average for the season is .280, he is the fighting type of Irishman most dangerous in a pinch.

Pat Collins can be discounted because of his weak throwing arm. The Cards would run wild on the bases with Pat behind the bat. Collins is a slugger as his early season home run record shows, but it is doubtful if Higgins calls upon him to catch unless something happens to Severid.

A catcher can be the most important factor in a world's series in several different ways. In 1914 the home team was the Boston Braves, the so-called "miracle team," to beat the Athletics in four straight games.

Bluege To Wed

Washington, September 29.—Another one of Washington's baseball stars is going to the altar.

Ossie Bluege, crack third baseman of the Senators, will be married Saturday morning at Raleigh, N. C., to Mrs. Margaret H. Eckert, the nurse who attended him when he was injured in the world series last year.

The romance began at that time. His marriage will follow by a few hours that of "Bugs" Harris, young pilot of the Senators, which will take place here Friday.

Hornsby and Ruth Carry Heavy Burden In Coming Battles

World Series Will Bring Together Two Great Rivals Of Diamond—Cardinal Pilot Faces First Time in Big Show—Home Run King's Seventh Series.

New York, September 29.—(AP)—As the outstanding two figures of the world series, Babe Ruth and Rogers Hornsby carry unusually heavy burdens of responsibility into the battles that start here Saturday.

Not since 1909, when Hans Wagner and Ty Cobb matched their playing skill, has the baseball classic brought together a rivalry so colorful as that between the mighty slugger of the Yankees and the brilliant manager of the Cardinals. Like Wagner, Cobb and others of playing fame, Hornsby and Ruth may find it difficult to meet expectations or they may, in the pinch, rise to greater heights.

This will be Hornsby's first turn in baseball's big show, but Ruth will be taking the stage for his seventh performance. The Babe alternately has been a "bust" and a star, but he has never quite broken in among the ranks of the champion immortals. Ruth's mauling played a big part in the defeat of the Giants by the Yankees in 1923, out of the previous two all-metropolitan classics, the Babe was subdued by John McGraw's "master minding."

While all eyes will focus on Hornsby and Ruth, it may fall to the lot of a less conspicuous performer to stop into the spotlight. More often than not the records reveal, the role of world series hero has fallen to unheralded players.

Here's the complete list of world series heroes as popularly chosen since 1905:

1905—Christy Mathewson, pitcher, Giants.
1906—George Rube, third-baseman, White Sox.
1907—Harry Steinfield, third-baseman, Cubs.
1908—Frank Chance, first baseman and manager, Cubs.
1909—Babe Adams, pitcher, Pirates.
1910—Jack Coombs, pitcher, Athletics.
1911—Frank Baker, third baseman, Athletics.
1912—Hugh Bedient, pitcher, Red Sox.
1913—Eddie Collins, second baseman, Athletics.
1914—Hank Gowdy, catcher, Braves.
1915—Duffy Lewis, outfielder, Red Sox.
1916—Harry Hooper, outfielder, Red Sox.
1917—Urban Faber, pitcher, White Sox.
1918—George Whiteman, outfielder, Red Sox.
1919—Dicky Kerr, pitcher, White Sox.
1920—Stanley Coveleskie, pitcher, Indians.
1921—Johnny Rawlings, second baseman, Giants.
1922—Heinie Groh, third baseman, Giants.
1923—Casey Stengel, outfielder, Giants.
1924—Stanley Harris, second baseman and manager, Senators.
1925—Hazen Cuyler, outfielder, Pirates.

DUESENBERG IS ENTERED IN FAIR RACE

One of the famous eight-line Duesenberg racing machines will be started in the auto races which close the Southern fair at Atlanta Saturday, October 9. John DePalma, Italian pilot, has entered and will drive the machine in one of the last meets of his most successful season.

DePalma's machine is similar to the speedway machines which have won steadily in big meets of the country, but it has lightened and shortened it until it is hardly larger than the smallest of Fronty-Ford dirt track cars. DePalma, who won the Miami 300-mile run last February and has placed well in speedway dashes since then, is the only board track star who has won heavily this year, and DePalma believes that in lightening his machine he has found the answer to difficult Duesenberg experiences he had this year. Aside from DePalma, Duesenberg pilots have not been collecting much of the speedway purse money, although they have been more than holding their own on dirt tracks. If DePalma's machine makes the showing he expects of it, the big car will probably be taken to the speedways to keep up the reputation which Miller's threaten to wrest from them.

Retail Trade Improving In Sixth Federal Reserve District, U.S. Figures Show

Both in Volume and Orders Increase Shown Over July, and Last August Figures.

Estimating total production of cotton in the south this year to be 15,810,000 bales, which is larger by 562,000 bales than the estimate a month earlier, and 293,679 bales less than the final gainings from the 1925 crop, the monthly business review covering conditions in the sixth federal reserve district issued Wednesday declared, on the other hand, that the consumption of cotton in the cotton-growing states was 18.9 per cent greater in August than a year ago.

The report covered activities and conditions in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee.

While the Florida citrus crop was estimated on September 1 at about 2,300,000 boxes greater than last year, the estimate did not take into consideration the damage done to the crop by the recent storm, which has not yet been accurately estimated, the report pointed out.

Retail Trade. The volume of retail trade, the report showed, was 8.4 per cent greater for August than for the corresponding month last year. Outstanding orders for August were 29.6 per cent greater than a month earlier, and 8.1 per cent greater than a year ago. Collections during August were 11.2 per cent less than in July, and 11.7 per cent greater than in August, 1925.

For August, the wholesale trade was better than that of the previous month's period, but lower than in August a year ago. The combined index number of wholesale trade for the district, computed from sales figures of firms dealing in groceries, dry goods, hardware and shoes, while lower than that for August, 1925, was higher than that for August of any other year since 1920.

The volume of loans and discounts by 35 member banks in selected cities in the sixth district increased more than nine million dollars between August 11 and September 15. The total loans, discounts and investments on September 15 was greater by $16,018,000 than on August 11, the report stated. Time deposits declined more than a million dollars while demand deposits increased $205,000.

Deposits Increase. The Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta increased the volume of bills discounted for its members in the sixth district more than ten million dollars during the period from August 11 to September 15. There was a decline of $19,810,000 in cash reserves, and an increase of $90,000 in deposits during this period. Decreases were shown in cash reserves and in deposits, but federal reserve notes were in circulation in a volume greater by $25,314,000 than a year ago.

Based upon a condition of 59.6 per cent of normal for the district, the cotton report issued by the U. S. department of agriculture early in September estimated the total production of cotton this year to be 15,155,000 bales. Cotton is opening rapidly in southern Georgia with some localities considerably behind in picking, resulting in some damage by recent rains. In the northern half of the state squaring and blooming were quite general during the last half of August, with further recovery from extreme lateness and hopper damage.

Effect of Rains. Continued rains have lowered the condition of the Florida cotton crop as well as that of Tennessee. The Louisiana crop declined seven points during the last half of August, due principally to boll weevil and leaf-worm damage. Excessive rain in certain localities have caused some of the lower bolls to rot, it was reported.

Cotton consumed in the cotton-growing states during August, according to the United States census bureau's statement, increased 7.5 per cent over that of the previous month, and 18.9 per cent over that of August, 1925. The number of spindles during August was slightly larger than that for July, and mills in the sixth district reported slight increases in production of both cotton yarn and cloth.

Building permits issued at 20 reporting cities in the sixth district were 27.9 per cent smaller in value than in August, 1925, and contract awards declined 32.3 per cent as compared with that month. The August total of building permits was the lowest reported for any month since April, 1925.

In the lumber industry, the volume of orders booked during August was 12.6 per cent greater than the production of August, 1925.

Recovering from its slump in July, the overall industry's production during August was 5 per cent greater than that of August, 1925.

Reports on new stores showed that the average price prevailing for turpentine was less than at this time last year but that the average price of rosin was higher, according to statistics compiled by the Turpentine and Rosin Producers' association. The average price for rosin during August was $14.44, compared with $13 for July, and with $10.67 12 for August, 1925.

Mill Manufacture. Confidential reports for August rendered to the Federal Reserve bank by cotton mills in the sixth district, which showed that over 26,500,000 yards of cloth were manufactured during that month. This production was five-tenths of 1 per cent greater than their output in July, and 3.7 per cent greater than their production in August a year ago. The aggregate figures showed declines in shipments, orders, unfilled orders and stocks, compared with July, but an increase in shipments, and decreases in orders, unfilled orders and stocks compared with August last year.

NEW HAMPSHIRE DEMOCRATS BACK PROHIBITION LAW

Concord, N. H., September 29.—(AP)—Democrats of New Hampshire failed today to vote for the lead of the party conventions in New York and Massachusetts which, during the past two days, have adopted platforms calling for "modification of the prohibition law." The New Hampshire convention went on record in favor of enforcement of all laws, "including the 18th amendment," and held the "Republican party, now in full control of enforcement, responsible for failure to enforce the latter."

The platform also urged relief for farmers, relief from burdensome taxation, retention of the primary law with stricter limitation on candidates' expenses, a forty-eight hour law for women and children, honesty in government, abolition of the poll tax for women and non-abandonment of railroad lines.

Nashville, Tenn., September 29.—(AP)—Ernest Horn, 27, shipping clerk at H. J. Heinz Pickle company, was found this afternoon in a drying condition at the bottom of the elevator shaft of the company's local warehouse. A trail of blood along the elevator shaft through five stories led city detectives to start an investigation to see if he was the victim of an accident or foul play. Life was extinct before the body was removed from the shaft following its discovery by a fellow employee.

A coroner's jury rendered a verdict that the man met his death from wounds received in the fall and probably from other causes unknown.

2 REPORTS SEEN ON SLUSH FUNDS

(Copy-right, 1926, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Washington, September 28.—Majority and minority views of the political practices of the Anti-Saloon league and the revelations of huge expenditures and ballot corruption in the Illinois and Pennsylvania senatorial primaries are to be included in a report of the senate's special election slush fund committee, which will be filed soon after congress convenes in December.

This became known today when Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the league, visited Senator McNary (republican, Oregon), a member of the committee, and was told that his organization's methods will be given special attention by the committee in a separate phase of the report.

In addition, Mr. Wheeler was told that Senator James A. Reed (democrat, Missouri), chairman of the committee and arch enemy of the league, undoubtedly would write the majority opinion which will be concurred in by Senators King (democrat, Utah), and La Follette (republican, Wisconsin). Minority views which Wheeler is relying upon to take the sting out of the Reed report will be presented by Senators McNary and Goff (republican, West Virginia), who are also expected to dissent from the Reed-King-La Follette report of the Illinois and Pennsylvania primary investigations.

The majority report will also suggest the institution of contempt proceedings against a number of witnesses who refused testimony in connection with their campaign expenditures in Pennsylvania and Illinois; notably Samuel Insull, Chicago utility magnate, and heavy contributor to funds raised for the campaign of Frank L. Smith, the successful candidate, and State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, of Chicago.

No definite date has been set for a resumption of the committee's hearing, but it is known that the committee plans to convene soon after the November elections and inquire not only into the election expenses of senatorial candidates in Pennsylvania and Illinois, but also into those of candidates in any state where there has been a sharp contest or where excessive expenditures are rumored.

CHEST DRIVE SPEAKERS HOLD FIRST MEETING

"It is no fun to ask a man for money but in a case like this it would be a greater disgrace not to ask," Dean Thomas H. Johnston, of St. Philip's Cathedral, told nearly 100 members of the Atlanta Community Chest speakers' committee at its first meeting, held in the Chamber of Commerce building Wednesday afternoon.

Appointment of Miss Mary Dickinson, secretary of the Anti-Tuberculosis society, as secretary of the speakers' committee was announced at the meeting by E. Mary Underwood, speakers' chairman. Miss Dickinson's office, at 33 Cain street, N. W., telephone Walnut 3580, will receive requests for speakers for civic, social, fraternal, religious or other organizations. All requests will be referred through Mr. Underwood to the speakers' committee to address the particular organization which makes the request.

Dean Johnston outlined the purpose and activities of the Community Chest. "We have little to address the particular organization which makes the request, the neglect of opportunity, the actual damage done to those we are trying to help, the fraud imposed on us by those whose profession it is to ask help that they do not deserve," Dean Johnston said.

Solves Charly Problems. "The Community Chest is the solution to all the shortcomings and the remedy for all the weaknesses in charitable work; it enables us to ask for the money we need, it goes to meet actual need and goes in proportion as the need is worst; it protects against the human jackals who play upon our sympathies for graft; it enables a program of service that keeps thousands from needing charity, that keeps hundreds from needing the charity of others; it homes and Florence Crittenton homes and Battle Hill sanitariums.

"We have become acquainted with the kind of work it is doing for us, that it is indeed a great work and must be made greater in order that it may accomplish more. We know why it is good and it is incumbent upon us to communicate our knowledge as best we can to those who do not know the work and do not comprehend the urgent need for it."

Must Not Fail. "We go into this campaign to do the hardest work a man ever has to do, to ask people to give money; we are not asking that they give us money; it is no fun to ask but for things like this it would be a far greater disgrace not to ask than it is to ask. And it will be a great work to ask far more to refuse than it will cost them to give because all their possessions after all can buy them no more than happiness and peace of mind and no man can be happy or at peace with himself when he knows that others are hungry, yes starving and even dying because he has refused to give as it has been proven to him. Ninety per cent of all a man has is a gift that he did not earn, a gift from the past that has made life easy and profitable for him, made it possible for him to accumulate something which at length he can only pass on as an unearned gift to someone else. In asking him to give we are offering him an opportunity worth far more to him than the gift we ask for the others, the outcast and helpless thousands of the poor whose sorrows we are trying to relieve. This campaign must not fail and it will not fail if we can make others understand that which we already know."

POLICE BOARD PLANS TO PARTICIPATE IN STATE FAIR

Plans were put under way Wednesday night by the police board to make "Atlanta Day" at the Georgia State fair in Macon, which will be October 21, a real day of Atlanta. The proposal first came up in the form of a request for the Atlanta police board to attend the fair.

A committee was named to confer with railroad officials in an effort to obtain an "Atlanta Special" run to Macon on that day and attach a special car for the police board and city officers. Members of the board enthusiastically endorsed the plan and definite action is expected to be taken next Monday when the matter is presented to council.

One of the quietest meetings of the police board this year was held Wednesday night and no matters of consequence were discussed. Minor details of operation of the department were discussed and passed on and the meeting adjourned after a short session.

SYSTEM SATURATED WITH DANGEROUS POISONS

"I have used Black-Draught as a medicine for constipation for fifteen years, and because I realize what a great help it has been in maintaining good health, I recommend it to others," says Mr. Miles Hopkins, of 1215 Center street, Catlettsburg, Ky.

"There was a time when my health was not so good. I suffered a great deal from gas pains. My system was saturated with poison which was not properly eliminated. From time to time I had severe headaches, and I felt sluggish and dull.

"I knew of Black-Draught as a medicine for constipation, so I thought I would try it. For a while I took a small dose every night until my system was rid of the accumulated poison.

"I gained in weight and my general health was good. That experience made me realize the merits of Black-Draught. I keep it in my home and when I begin to feel lifeless and dull, I take a dose, after which I feel O. K. again.

"People generally do not realize the risk they take in allowing constipation to run on. I try to keep my system cleansed, and I find Black-Draught a great aid in doing this."

Constipation damps up poisons in the bowels, where they are absorbed into the general system, causing many serious symptoms.

Black-Draught relieves the constipation, flushes the system out in a natural way, carrying with it the poisons and relieves the troubles which they cause.

If you suffer from constipation, be sure to try Black-Draught.

Added Beauty In an Hour

By Edna Wallace Hopper
I use a hair dressing which great experts made especially for me. It keeps my hair curly, gives it a sheen. I never go to a hairdresser, never have a Marcel wave. Yet everyone who sees me on the stage or off marvels at my curly, glowing hair.
Now I have placed this dressing at every woman's call. All toilet counters supply it as Edna Wallace Hopper's Wave and Sheen. The price is 75c. My guarantee comes with each bottle. If it doesn't delight you, doesn't double the beauty of your hair at once, ask for your money back.
Go try it now. It is one of the best helps I ever found for women, especially for those with bobbed hair.

Princess Royal Marks the Beginning of a New Era in Fine Silk Underthings!

The Difference Between Princess Royal and Other Silk Underwear

[1]—It is made of Spindrift 100% pure silk, not "weighted" or "loaded." It is as soft as chiffon yet 35% stronger than equal weight glove silk.

[2]—It is guaranteed not to shrink!

[3]—Each garment is individually cut by hand.

[4]—Each garment is full-fashioned to fit exactly all the curves of the figure without bulk or wrinkles.

[5]—Human hands cannot tear it—and unless it is torn, it cannot run.

[6]—Embroidered silk buds at crotches and all other seam junctures doubly reinforce these points.

[7]—Shoulder straps are locked into the top silk band, so that they will not tear off.

[8]—Reinforced buttonholes on the inside of waist bands and leg bands allow elastics to be withdrawn or inserted without cutting the silk.

[9]—Straps, ruffles, etc., are finished by a picot edge that always keeps its shape and gives a dainty, lace-like appearance.

[10]—Every seam is stitched with pure thread silk.

SILK UNDERWEAR, yesterday, was about the same thing as silk underwear ten years ago.

Today—with the suddenness of an entirely new fashion—begins the era of something really different—something permanently better—PRINCESS ROYAL Underthings made of pure, rich silk—finer, softer, more luxurious and at the same time stronger than anything you have ever before seen!

The great secret of their beauty and long wear is in the new, flawlessly pure silk of which they are made—Spindrift.

Never before has there been a pure silk so chiffon-soft and at the same time so iron-strong. Try as they will, human hands cannot tear it. And unless it is torn, it cannot run.

PRINCESS ROYAL Undergarments are unconditionally guaranteed not to shrink, no matter how often they are washed! Each garment is individually cut by hand—and is reinforced at all the points of greatest wear by dainty silk embroidered buds that "lock" the seams. It is as perfectly designed and as subtly shaped to fit the feminine form as a fine full-fashioned silk stocking, making a splendid foundation for today's mode.

You can get PRINCESS ROYAL Underthings exclusively at this store in beautiful, soft shades of flesh, rose, maize, Nile green, and orchid. Also black or white.

Beautiful Hand-Carved Empire Colonial Sofa, One of Many Distinctive Designs Shown by Stephen Philibosian, Inc.

The beautiful Empire Colonial Sofa above was photographed at the store of Stephen Philibosian, Inc., which shows one of the many distinctive pieces of furniture that are making this store one of the most popular in the entire south.

This particular design was selected by a committee of experts for display at the Philadelphia sesqui-centennial exposition. It is of hand-carved mahogany and would make a handsome addition to the furnishings of any modern home.

The furniture buying public, more and more, relies upon the big establishment of Stephen Philibosian, Inc., for the latest in furniture design. Here is a store whose close touch with the furniture markets of the country provides the public with an opportunity at all times for the selection of furniture that carries out the very latest vogue in home furnishings.

Another distinctive feature of this store is the fact that it sells only for cash. This policy eliminates much of the usual expense incurred in the mercantile business, and the saving is passed along to the customers of the store in lower prices.

Everyone who visits this beautiful store at 281 Peachtree street, expresses amazement at the exceptionally low prices for such quality merchandise.

This, according to Stephen Philibosian, is directly due to the cash policy of the business.

Stephen Philibosian, Inc., never conducts a special sale but the public is invited to compare their prices and the quality of their merchandise any month in the year.—(adv.)

WOMEN OF
MIDDLE AGEPraise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Annie Kinski of 526 1st Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes that she became so weak and run-down that she was not able to do her housework. She saw the name Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the paper and said to her husband, "I will try that medicine and see if it will help me." She says she took six bottles and is feeling much better.

Mrs. Mattie Adams, who lives in Downing Street, Brewton, Ala., writes as follows: "A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and since taking it I feel like a different woman."

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grandchildren, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women past fifty say they owe their health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Advice to Girls

on correct skin care—as urged today by leading skin specialists

By NORMA TALMADGE

Copyright, 1926, by P. O. Beauty Features.

Just one rule to follow—start for one week in this way. It has brought naturally clear complexions to thousands.

DON'T think a naturally clear skin is beyond you—or, that one comes only as the result of costly beauty treatments. Modern beauty science proves otherwise.

Printed below is a rule anyone can follow without bother or expense. Authorities say it has given more women the charm of natural skin loveliness than any other method known. It has almost entirely supplanted the artificial methods of yesterday.

In your own interest, try it for one week. Note the improvement that comes when your pores are properly cleansed of their accumulations with the gentle lather of Palmolive in this way.

Remember that before Palmolive came, women were told, "use no soap on your faces." Soaps then were judged too harsh. Palmolive is a beauty soap made for one purpose only: to safeguard your complexion. 60 years of soap study stand behind it. Millions of pretty skins prove its effectiveness beyond all doubt.

BE SURE YOU GET THE REAL PALMOLIVE. It costs but 10c the cake!—so little that millions let it do for their bodies what it does for their faces. Obtain Palmolive today. Note what one week of its use will bring. The Palmolive Company (Del. Corp.), Chicago, Illinois.

Follow these rules day in and day out. Your skin will be soft and lovely.

THE RULE IN SKIN CARE THAT EXPERTS URGE

Wash your face gently with soothing Palmolive Soap, massaging it softly into the skin. Rinse thoroughly first with warm water, then with cold. If your skin is inclined to be dry, apply a touch of good cold cream—that is all.

Do this regularly, and particularly in the evening. Use powder and rouge if you wish. But never leave them on over night. They clog the pores, often enlarge them. Blackheads and disfigurements often follow. They must be washed away.

Follow these rules day in and day out. Your skin will be soft and lovely.

Do not use ordinary soaps in the treatment given above. Do not think any green soap, or represented as of palm and olive oils, is the same as Palmolive.

Black Butterflies

By ELIZABETH JORDAN

INSTALLMENT X. AN ETERNAL FAREWELL.

Dorinda rose to go, and this time Norma accepted the action as meaning departure. They faced each other uncertainly.

"If only you would marry," Norma brought out. "That would give you control of your money, and solve the whole problem, and satisfy everybody. A young married woman can be as gay and unconventional as she likes, in season."

Dorinda laughed and kissed her. "Thank you for that, dear," she said. "It's the usual valedictory, and it shows the discussion is ended. Good-by—and good luck."

Norma went with her into the hall.

"Let's keep on thinking," she begged, "and see if we can't find a way." But she spoke without hope, and the bang of the big front door as Dorinda descended the steps had the effect of an eternal farewell.

Dorinda walked home slowly through the falling snow. Already the streets and roofs and trees were mantle wrapped and the aspect of the old town's best residence suburb was that of a master etching, but she saw none of its beauty. A black depression enveloped her. When she reached her house it faced her with brightly smiling eyes. Some of the butterflies had come, the illumination meant, and were making themselves at home, as was their comfortable habit. Well, let them continue to do so. She was in no mood to see any one. She walked on aimlessly, sternly looking herself in the face. "Keep on thinking," Norma had advised, and Dorinda was obeying the injunction. But she obeyed without volition. A force stronger than her will shaped and directed her mental processes, with surprising clearness she saw herself as she seemed to others. She had just about done for Dorinda Maxwell, with that wretched party last night, by a sharp rap at his door. Hatch, and could forecast the action he would take. She must anticipate that action if she could. But how? The talk of getting out, of giving up her inheritance, of living like a sparrow, as her newly chosen companions lived, was all nonsense, of course, and Mr. Hatch when he thought it over was clever enough to know it was nonsense. Moreover, despite her black memories, Dorinda loved her home and was proud of it. She must think of some plan to save her home, her head down, hands deep in the side pockets of her fur coat, kicking the snow before her like a child. Vaguely at first, and then more clearly, a plan took shape in her mind.

That evening about 8 o'clock, Goddard, having somewhat reluctantly settled down to the reading of law in the dimly lighted "third floor back," which was his home, was disturbed by a sharp rap at his door. The voice of Maggie, maid of all work in Mrs. Kemp's boarding house, voiced its sense of injury from the hall.

"There's a party on the phone, Mr. Goddard," it remotely informed him. "An' I called and called you from the foot of the stairs, but you wouldn't hear. The party says it's urgent."

Goddard apologized and volplaned to the lower hall. He was already annoyed by the "party," whoever it proved to be, it might be a girl to get back to work after the interruption as it had been to get down to it at the start. Moreover, a journey up and down two long flights of stairs was hard on Maggie, who, he lightly estimated, had already made it several hundred times that day. He seized the dangling mouthpiece and barked into it.

"Goddard speaking."

"O, Mr. Goddard,"

He frowned. The staccato voice was Dorinda Maxwell's, and the sound of it laid no balm on his troubled spirit. "I hope I'm not disturbing you, but I want to consult you about something very important. Could you come over to my house now? It's entirely a personal matter," she hurriedly went on, as he did not speak.

Goddard grinned into the dimness of the hall. She was making it clear that there were no guests to be taken home this time. Nevertheless he hesitated, telling himself that he was fed up with the girl and her affairs.

"Please come," she added—"it's really urgent."

"O, well, all right. I'll be there in half an hour," he rather ungraciously told her, and replaced the receiver without listening to her eager acknowledgment.

He was glad to find her alone when he reached the house, and waiting for him in the room he had admired earlier in the day. He had taken the car ride and the subsequent tramp resentfully, telling himself that he was on some wild goose chase; but in the Maxwell hall he gave his hat and coat to Annie and, entering the library, approached the fire and his hostess with an emotion stronger than mere resignation. It was worth coming through the storm to have another half hour in this library, and again he told himself that the room was a nice setting for the girl. She was in full evening dress, which he felt to be a touch of swank. He was glad he was wearing a dark business suit, and he settled his walking shoes on the fender with defiant firmness. She couldn't move him with her splendor, he reflected, though she was as radiant as a Christmas tree. She was wearing a silver thing, with shining beads on it. That was as far as his analysis went, but his strikingly blue eyes lingered on the gown and on her face.

She was a little thing, and he preferred small women. Sitting, as she was, almost lost in her luxurious chair, she had an effect of feminine helplessness which he admired even while he realized that it was misleading. This young person helpless! She was a match for him and for a dozen like him. He recalled the cool effectiveness with which she had pressed him into an unpleasant service earlier in the day. Her upbringing had made her as hard as nails, and she probably had a will as unyielding as old Maxwell's, whose stubbornness had been a byword in his community.

Having brought him there, the girl seemed in no haste to tell him why she had done so. Quietly, out of the corner of an eye, she was taking him in—appraising him anew in the light of the idea that had led her to summon him. He was a big young man, and there was no question that he was good looking—unusually good looking, though a bit too serious. Probably that was what made his unexpectedly boyish smile so attractive. She approved of his black hair with the wave in it, of his unusual eyes, of his clear skinned, smooth shaven brown face, and his strong well shaped hands. She approved the self-consciousness which made him ignore the contrast between his heavy shoes and her satin slippers, now side by side on the fender. Most of all, she approved of his suggestion of poise and quiet strength.

"It was a really good idea of you to come," she brought out at last.

"Between you and me, I think it was," he cheerfully agreed.

"I hope I didn't interfere with an engagement."

"O, no, I don't go out much. I was reading."

David didn't care how long she kept this up. The comfort of the room was enveloping him like a wadded garment. He fixed his eyes on the fire and blinked at it almost drowsily. He was recalled from his sense of well being by the girl's voice. There was a quality in it which made him stiffen into close attention.

"Mr. Goddard," she began, "I've been thinking a lot since I saw you this afternoon."

"Thinking is an exercise that has been warmly commended," he reminded her.

"I suppose you fancy I'm not up to it," she interpreted. "You'll change your mind before I'm through."

"Changing my mind is one of the best things I do." He was beginning to be interested. Her seriousness seemed genuine.

"I have been realizing, among other things," she continued soberly, "that I've given myself a frightfully black eye by that party last night."
